Application Process for Live-In Advisor Positions

Live-in advisors live and serve in their role for one academic year (fall, winter, spring) with the potential for a summer appointment and/or renewal for another year. Regular (at minimum termly) feedback will be given. Unsatisfactory performance may lead to an early move-out request.

Application Process:
To livinglearning@dartmouth.edu, please send resume and a short cover letter describing your experience with any of the following as applicable:

- working with undergraduate students
- advising undergraduate students
- past work with living learning communities
- past work with residential communities
- skills and experiences that match the specific role to which you are applying
- what work/school you will be doing at Dartmouth in the upcoming academic year
- verification that you have permission from the needed entities that you may serve in this role, including the specific verifier’s name (ex. faculty advisor, department, etc.)
- your availability time-wise for the role (hours per week as well as dates at the beginning and end of the academic year as well as any extended time that you expect to be away from campus during the academic year)
- contact information for two references
- anything else that you would like to share

Finalists for the position may be asked to participate in an interview.

All U.S. and international graduate students are welcome to apply.

*Important Information for International Students
If you hold a non-immigrant visa status, please check with the Office of Visa and Immigration Services (OVIS) to verify that serving in this role will not put you in violation of federal rules and regulations as they apply to on-campus employment for international students.
