

This is a SCIFER status flash for 0540 UT on January 4. If you do not want these emails, please ask to be removed from the mailing list.

SCIFER is being prepared for launch by going vertical. The telemetry tracking crew has reached their stations after passing the avalanche zone.

The science operations center has moved to the KHO Observatory near EISCAT. Everything is ready for launch except...

1. High altitude winds are too strong.
2. There is no space weather.

So we wait.

cheers, Paul
