Exhibit B: (an ongoing dialogue with E-journal troubleshooting team)

“Colin,

Our current JAMA subscription only provides access to full text content from 1998 to present. We would have to pay an additional fee to access the earlier issues you referenced.”

“This can't be accurate. I just uploaded an article from 1972 while helping a patron on-line and she was able to access it from her computer also without a problem.”

“Then please send me a PDF of the earliest article you are able to access, as well as a screenshot of what JAMA's homepage looks like on your computer (be sure to include the top portion that displays account information)...I personally cannot access anything prior to 1998...”

This scenario involved a doctor who wanted to logon. He needed to activate his net I.D. however he was pressed for time so I logged him on and sent a visual tutorial to his email.

(Imagine the time it would take to write an email description of this!)
