

Dartmouth College and University of Melbourne Discuss Oracle HR

On May 25, Nigel Waugh, Workplace Relations Manager for the University of Melbourne, Australia, visited the Office of Human Resources to discuss Dartmouth's implementation of the Oracle HR system. After originally contacting Cheryl Josler, Dartmouth's HRIS Project Manager, earlier in the month, Waugh came to Hanover for a two-hour meeting. In addition to Josler, James Burger, David Chapin, Linda Langley, all from Human Resources, and Abha Singh, from Administrative Computing, participated in the information session.

Photo: James Burger

The University of Melbourne's Nigel Waugh discusses Oracle HR with Abha Singh (left) and Cheryl Josler.

Waugh was particularly interested in the "HR and broader business benefits" gained from using Oracle. Josler spoke in detail about HR systems strategies, cross-functional teams, and upgrades to the system, while Singh provided an overview of pre-production testing processes and cycles.

Dartmouth was one of three schools (the other two being Rochester Institute of Technology and Ithaca College) using Oracle that Waugh was able to visit while in the States. Said Josler, "We enjoyed the opportunity to share our experiences and expertise."