

GRID Undergraduate Research-Travel Fellowships Deadline: November 24th

The Gender Research Institute, with additional funding from the Program in Women's and Gender Studies, the Office of the Provost, the Office of the Dean of Faculty, and the Dickey Center for International Understanding, offers 4 research-travel fellowships for students to help design and participate in a research symposium at the University of Deusto, Bilbao (Basque Country, Spain). The symposium will be on a gender-related topic of international significance and will be held in June 2015.

The Gender Research Institute, in collaboration with faculty at the University of Deusto (Bilbao and San Sebastian campuses) and Boston College, will co-host a 2-3 day research symposium in June 2015 in the Basque city of Bilbao. A small number of outstanding students from each institution will participate in the symposium and assist with its planning. At the symposium, Dartmouth students will engage with faculty and students from each institution as well as with guest speakers and practitioners.

In late January 2015, student and faculty participants from each institution will meet in Boston to determine the topic of the June symposium. Two possible topics are: sexual assault on college campuses in a comparative/international framework or immigration and gender.

We are hoping to select a cohort of students from a broad array of academic disciplines, students who want to explore the place of gender in the framing of pressing societal issues in an international context. No knowledge of Spanish is required, however students who have an academic interest in contemporary Spain/Europe are encouraged to apply.

Interested students should send: (1) a two-page letter of interest outlining their academic interests, preparation in gender-related topics, and their personal goals for the symposium; (2) the names of two referees.

Please send questions and applications to GRID@dartmouth.edu. Travel, housing, and meal expenditures for the meeting in Boston and the symposium in Deusto will be fully covered by the fellowship.

Deadline: November 24th. Finalists will be interviewed the first week of January.
