PREFACE.

After many unavoidable delays, this long-expected work issues from the press. It was projected by the late Rev. Dr John Richards in Aug. 1858, but in March 1859 occurred his deeply lamented death, so that seven months only were occupied by him in a most arduous undertaking. Previous to the commencement of 1858, he had, however, assisted Prof. Sanborn in preparing the Triennial of that year for publication, and as I had furnished the dates of the deaths of Dartmouth Alumni, its Medical Classes and Alibi for the Triennials of 1849, 1852, and 1855, almost entirely, he applied to me for additional information. The consequence was, that I gave him the known ages of all the deceased in the Triennials, and added, in relation to the Alumni, the days and months of the years when deaths had taken place, with the location thereof, to be treasured up in the College library. These items were so numerous that they drew from him in reply the epithet, "marvellous," and created the design of executing the present work. They were collected by me from 1844 to 1858, and were most cheerfully rendered to him. So also in about forty letters, all I knew of dead and living graduates was duly communicated.

Such being the case, on the decease of the good Doctor, all that he and a daughter had obtained was transmitted to me for corrections and additions. But so great were the imperfections of every kind, that from that time to this I have been diligently employed in accumulating a mass of information which has astonished many graduates who have seen the old and new manuscripts. Thousands on thousands of newspapers have been consulted, with numerous town histories, family genealogies, classologies, and periodical works. Letters, both written and printed, have been freely despatched; advertisements inserted in papers and two Dartmouth Triennials, and the field of inquiry enlarged so as to include the maternal parentage and marriages. I found also that without exact dates of births as well as deaths it was impossible to give the correct age of the deceased, no distinction being often made between a current year and its completion, between the 70th year, for instance, and the full age of 70.

For one or two years after the papers came into my hands, Miss Julia A. Richards, now Mrs Booth, wrote at my request to several graduates, obtaining valuable returns, but then went to near Port Gibson, Miss. and left me unaided by her. Some Class Secretaries and other Alumni, too numerous to mention, have likewise materially benefited me by their contributions. But Mr Baxter Perry Smith, of the class of 1854, has far exceeded all others by the vast amount of intelligence he has succeeded in gaining for five or six years last past in New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and New York city, through personal visits and letters to graduates, their relatives and friends. And yet, even now, there are deficiencies which living graduates could have supplied, and surviving relatives or friends can furnish. I have therefore concluded to publish at present only 500 copies of the Sketches, one of which will be interleaved and devoted to additions and emendations, which are earnestly requested by me from all interested, so that whether I survive or not to a second edition, the materials for a more perfect production may be kept in preservation.

Some persons may object that no more has been said of the personal or religious character of many, especially deceased, individuals, but the little that does appear transcends the original design of Dr Richards, which was almost purely statistical, and has been adhered to for the most part lest too great a bulk should enhance the price of the volume and diminish its circulation. For the lives of the more distinguished, readers must repair to what has already been recorded at length, and content themselves with the limited annals which are here intended to preserve from oblivion the name of every educated son of Dartmouth, no matter what may be his claim to the remembrance of posterity. As changes of residence are continually occurring, it is to be understood that the last place known may not always be the right location now.

BRIEF HISTORY OF DARTMOUTH COLLEGE.

United with ch. in Windham, 1729.

ELEAZAR WHEELOCK, A. M.–D. D. the son of Dea. Ralph and Ruth (Huntington) Wheelock, was born at Windham, Ct, April 22, 1711, and died at Hanover, April 24, 1779, æ. 68, minus nine days, as his birth was according to Old Style. He graduated at Yale College in 1733; studied divinity and was ordained pastor of the 2d Cong. Church in that part of Lebanon called Lebanon Crank, now Columbia, Ct, in March 1735. Here his pastorate continued for about thirty-five years, and in 1754 an Indian Charity School was established by him and named after Mr Joshua Moor of Mansfield, Ct, one of its principal American benefactors. After its existence for sixteen years, devoted to the civilization and education of Indian youth, Dr Wheelock, whose honorary degree was conferred by the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, June 29, 1767, determined on obtaining a more suitable location for it, and adding thereto a seminary of learning wherein they and English pupils should be trained up in classical, philosophical, and all literary, pursuits.

To effect this, early in 1770 he explored the western parts of New Hampshire in search of the contemplated place, and eventually made choice of Hanover, then called Dresden. A more healthy situation could not have been selected. By the United States census of 1850, Vermont, the border State, was found to have the smallest mortality for the ten preceding years, in proportion to its relative population, of the entire Union, and Massachusetts the greatest, while the venerable age of the early Dartmouth scholars may be seen in what follows the sketches given of Laban Ainsworth, 1778, and Samuel Wood, 1779. The colony itself was also preferred to others in consequence of the large landed endowments offered by the Hon. John Wentworth, Harv. Univ. 1755, its Royal Governor. Through him also was procured the charter of Dartmouth College, dated Dec. 13, 1769, from his Majesty King George the Third. It was so named in compliment to William Legge, Earl of Dartmouth, one of the excellent of the earth, who, with the world-renowned John Thornton, had materially contributed to the pecuniary benefit of the Moor School. In this charter, Dr Wheelock was recognised as the Founder and President of the College, with the privilege of nominating his successor. Twelve persons, including himself and the Governor, were also by this instrument appointed its first Trustees, having power not only to confer degrees, but to fill vacancies, though not to increase or diminish the original number.

President Wheelock removed to Hanover in August 1770, and was soon joined by his wife, Mary (Brinsmaid), and their family; Bezaleel Woodward, A. M. the first College Tutor, who became its first Professor of Mathematicks and Natural Philosophy in 1782; several students, and others designing a permanent residence; in all about 70 persons. A more remarkable settlement for such a purpose was never made. It was in the midst of a wilderness, and upon a plain where a few of its pine-trees of majestick height had been recently felled, and two or three log huts constituted the only shelter. But Dr Wheelock was the very man to contend with difficulties, and in the spirit of an enlarged philanthropy to overcome them. The huts were multiplied; a frame house for himself, a College for the students, eighty feet long and two stories high, a Commons' Hall or Refectory, were speedily constructed under his personal supervision. Nothing, however, was in sufficient forwardness to protect them entirely from the piercing storms of winter. Upwards of four months the snow, shielded from the rays of the sun by the evergreen forest, was four feet in depth. Severe hardships ensued, and throughout the inclement season indefatigable courage and fortitude were requisite in order to maintain the infant seminary.

Nor did they for a moment fail on the part of the distinguished founder. His scholarship for that period was good; his character unblemished; his religious views in accordance with those of the celebrated Edwards and the divines of that school; his popularity as a preacher inferior only to that of his friend, the unrivalled Whitfield; his confidence of enjoying the smiles of Providence upon the great object of his life unbounded. And hence, unwearied in zeal and undaunted by obstacles, he pursued a course without a parallel in the land of his birth, and richly deserving the successful result. Of the ten classes instructed by him, 99 pupils became graduates of Dartmouth, whereas the first ten years of Harvard produced but 53, and those of Yale 36. All this too when that portion of New Hampshire was sparsely peopled, and at a time that the above institutions were venerable from age and deeply seated in the affections of the States they adorned. But my limits forbid enlargement. For nine years the good President occupied his position, commanding universal approbation, and then passed from time to eternity, worthily entitled to the commendation engraved on his monument, — "By the Gospel he subdued the ferocity of the savage, and to the civilized he opened new paths of science." He married, 1. Sarah (Davenport) Maltby, relict of Capt. William Maltby of New Haven, Ct, and daughter of the Rev. Mr Davenport of Stamford, Ct, in 1735. 2. Mary Brinsmaid of Milford, Ct. His children were 10 in number, of whom were John Wheelock, D. C. 1771, Eleazar and James Wheelock, both D. C. 1776.

The next President was his second son, the Hon. JOHN WHEELOCK, A. M.–LL. D. who graduated at the first commencement in Aug. 1771, and entered upon the duties of his office in 1779, at the early age of twenty-five years. Dartmouth had then sustained the loss of many students, especially in the two lower classes, in consequence of the Revolutionary War. But a reaction soon occurred, and throughout his long presidency of thirty-six years, it was in a very flourishing condition. Under him the present Dartmouth Hall was built in 1786, the Medical Department established in 1798, with Nathan Smith, M. D. for its Professor, and ere long a Medical Hall was erected. For additional particulars recourse must be had to the sketches of him in the year 1771, where also will be found the reason for shunning a minute account of his ejection from office.

The third President was FRANCIS BROWN, A. M.–D. D. of the class of 1805. His accession was followed by painful circumstances. The legislature of New Hampshire had passed an act materially modifying the charter of the College, increasing the number of Trustees, and changing its title to that of Dartmouth University, of which the Rev. William Allen, D. D. a graduate of Harvard in 1802, became President. But the old Trustees refused to acquiesce in this proceeding, insomuch that the two institutions were carried on at the same time in antagonism to each other. Resort was then had to a legal tribunal. In the first instance, the case came before the State Supreme Court, by which the legislative act was sustained and the University pronounced the only valid corporation. From this decision the College Trustees appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States, of which the profound jurist, John Marshall, LL. D. was Chief Justice. After a long argument by eminent counsel on both sides, Daniel Webster, D. C. 1801, being one of the advocates for his Alma Mater, the judgment of the inferior court was reversed and old Dartmouth restored to its former position, much to the satisfaction of the country, by reason of the maintenance of eleemosynary and vested corporate rights.

On this great occasion, President Brown went far beyond his strength in his personal efforts to vindicate what he deemed a legitimate and righteous cause. His health became seriously affected, and in the prime of life, to the calamitous loss of his beloved seminary and the grief of innumerable friends, he descended to the silent grave, after occupying his responsible station for five years. See a notice of him in the year 1805.

Daniel Dana, A. M.–D. D. a graduate of 1788, was the fourth President of Dartmouth, and entered upon the discharge of his duties in 1820, resigning however in 1821. This excellent man and much-esteemed divine had therefore small opportunity to signalize himself in the academical chair, as his class record will show that he did most effectually in the pulpit.

Bennet Tyler, A. M.–D. D. the son of James and Anne (Hungerford) Tyler, was born at Middlebury, Ct, July 6, 1783, and died at East Windsor, Ct, May 14, 1858, æ. 74. He graduated at Yale College in 1804; studied divinity with the Rev. Asahel Hooker, A. M. of Goshen, Ct; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Church at South Britain, Ct, June 1, 1808, and was dismissed in 1822 to become the fifth President of Dartmouth, a situation enjoyed by him from 1822 to 1828. He was next installed pastor of the Cong. Church at Portland, Me, in Sept. 1828; was dismissed thence to be inducted President and Professor of Didactick Theology at East Windsor Theo. Seminary in Ct, May 13, 1834, a position held by him for twenty-three years, to July 15, 1857, the date of his resignation, and less than a year before his death. Nothing remarkable, except a powerful revival of religion, came to pass during his brief presidency of six years, but his character was very estimable, and all the important posts of which he was the incumbent were filled with dignity and reputation. His publications, 35 in number, were highly thought of. John Ellery Tyler, D. C. 1831, was his son.

Nathan Lord, A. M.–D. D. the son of the Hon. John and Mehitabel (Perkins) Lord, was born at South Berwick, Me, Nov. 28, 1792. He graduated at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me, in 1809; taught at Exeter Academy; studied divinity at Andover Theo. Seminary, Ms, graduating in 1815; was ordained a colleague pastor of the Cong. Church at Amherst, May 22, 1816; dismissed Sept. 22, 1828; was inaugurated the sixth President of Dartmouth, Oct. 29, 1828, and resigned the office at the College commencement in 1863, after holding it nearly 35 years. Throughout this long period, this eminent divine maintained a proud position in the discharge of the arduous duties of his elevated station. Students flocked to the institution in great numbers, and at no previous time had it attained the celebrity gained under his auspicious rule. The requirements for admission were materially enlarged, and a far higher amount of scholarship exacted in order to obtain collegiate honours. He had peculiar talents as an executive officer, and though rigid in discipline, no one could be more popular or beloved by the youth committed to his care. In addition to this, the augmented corps of Professors, coöperating with him, was composed of men of eminent abilities in their several departments, who vied with each other in contributing to the successful pursuit of letters and philosophy.

So numerous indeed was the resort of students to this now famous seminary that Dartmouth Hall was no longer adequate to their accommodation, and in Dr Lord's time Wentworth, Thornton, and Reed, Halls came into existence, with an Astronomical Observatory, built and furnished with instruments by the munificence of Dr George Cheyne Shattuck, LL. D. of the class of 1803. Great additions were also made to the Academical and Medical Libraries, as also to those collected by the students, all comprising now about 40,000 volumes. There is also a valuable Mineralogical Cabinet given by Frederick Hall, LL. D. of the class of 1803, and a Chemical Laboratory with an ample apparatus. Nor must the Chandler Scientifick Department be forgotten, that was founded and endowed with the noble gift of 50,000 dollars in 1851 by the bequest of the late Abiel Chandler, A. M. a graduate of Harvard in 1806, and whose first class became Bachelors of Science in 1854.

Successful results like these redound to the infinite credit of the ex-president, and long may he live reposing on the laurels adorning his brow. Many publications have proceeded from his pen, one of which, on slavery, was at variance with Northern sentiment, and another came into collision with the anti-millenarian views too prevalent in our Christian community. But still in them, in sermons and other productions, he is acknowledged to have exhibited talents of a high rank, and to have expressed himself in terms where intellectual acumen and literary scholarship predominate to an unusual degree. It is moreover a remarkable fact, and one believed to be unprecedented in our American colleges, that Dr Lord is the father of eight sons who have completed their education at Dartmouth in the years 1836, 1839, 1842, 1843, 1851, and 1856, six of whom are still living.

Asa Dodge Smith, A. M.–D. D. and LL. D. who graduated in the class of 1830, where his statisticks may be found, is the seventh and present President of Dartmouth, and was inaugurated as such Oct. 18, 1863. His antecedents are altogether of a deserving and encouraging character, fully justifying the choice of the Trustees and giving promise of substantial benefits accruing to the now venerable and venerated College. Already popular within its walls, and greatly prized by its living Alumni, he has promoted its interests with unflagging zeal and perseverance. Already between 75 and 100,000 dollars have been added to its resources, and the good work goes bravely on, challenging not only the liberality of its graduates but of numerous friends who appear equally anxious to render it more and more a renowned seat of learning and science.

Among others, George Henry Bissell, A. M. of the class of 1845, has judiciously appropriated a large sum for a Gymnasium, which is now in process of erection, if not completed, at the estimated cost of 25,000 dollars. A monumental edifice is also contemplated in memory of the gallant sons of Dartmouth who perilled and lost their lives in their country's cause in the late atrocious Rebellion. It will be of large dimensions, and some part thereof, it is said, will be devoted to the reception of the College library. Although great numbers of the Alumni were thus brilliantly employed, a complete record of their names is yet unpublished, and the under-graduate classes were no less prodigal of their services. Owing to this, the size of some of them was most seriously diminished, and the entrance to others greatly curtailed. But the present two lower classes, with redoubled ranks, indicate that the old prosperity is reviving and a bright future unerringly revealed.

Even this unpretending history would, however, be eminently defective were nothing to appear pertaining to the immense benefits which have resulted from the labours of the first President, and those who have been his successors in office. From 1771 to 1867, inclusive, the number of Academical graduates has been 3550; and though sketches of them are collected in this work, it will not be amiss to give a condensed account of the positions some of them have occupied in life. There have been 31 Judges of the U. S. and State Supreme Courts; 15 Senators in Congress, and 61 Representatives; 2 U. S. Cabinet Ministers; 4 Ambassadors to Foreign Courts; 1 Postmaster-General; 14 Governors of States, and 1 of a Territory; 25 Presidents of Colleges; 104 Professors of Academical, Medical, or Theological Colleges. Large numbers also have been Judges of Minor Courts and Members of State Legislatures. On 24 the degree of LL. D. has been conferred, and on 106 that of D. D. To all these must be added a vast body of divines, lawyers, and physicians, with many instructors, literary men, and authors. I could give the names of the more distinguished and compare them without reluctance with the graduates of our most prominent Seminaries. But numbers forbid, and the selection of a few would be invidious to a residue equally entitled to enumeration. One circumstance only will be sufficient to prove that Dartmouth has deserved well of her country. At the same time, there were residing in Boston, Ms, no less than seven of her sons, who were justly regarded as ranking among the brightest luminaries of the law. They were Samuel Sumner Wilde, 1789, Daniel Webster, 1801, Richard Fletcher, 1806, Joseph Bell, 1807, Joel Parker, 1811, Rufus Choate, 1819, and Charles Bishop Goodrich, 1822. Not to enlarge, with few exceptions, her influence in religion has been emphatically conservative, and her sympathies in a national point of view eminently patriotick. She has been the nursery of sound divines, devoted missionaries, profound jurists, skilful physicians, brilliant statesmen, accomplished scholars, classical and learned writers. Such are the worthies she has given to the Union, and on these rest her claims to a nation's gratitude.

In the following pages, the State designation is not added to cities and towns in the case of New Hampshire, nor when towns or cities of other States have been already given in the same article will it be a second time annexed. As to abbreviations, they will be easily understood, though D. C. for Dartmouth College, sometimes relates to the District of Columbia.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

* Levi Frisbie, A. M. the son of Elisha and Rachel (Levi) Frisbie, was born at Branford, Ct, Apr. 11, 1748, N. S. or Mar. 31, 1748, O. S. and died at Ipswich, Ms, Feb. 25, 1806, æ. 57. He studied divinity with President Eleazar Wheelock, D. D. at Hanover; was there ordained as a missionary May 21, 1772; went thence, with the Rev. David M'Clure, to the Delaware Indians on the Muskingum; afterwards to the Indians in Canada and Maine; owing to the Revolutionary war, the mission ended. He was installed pastor of the 1st Cong. Ch. at Ipswich, Feb. 7, 1776, and so remained successful and beloved to the close of life. His published works were; a Poem of 180 lines, in eulogy of Moor's Indian Charity School and Dart. College; an Oration on the Peace of 1783; two Fast sermons; a Thanksgiving sermon; a Eulogy on the death of Washington; a sermon before the Society for propagating the Gospel among the Indians. He married, 1. Zeruiah, dau. of Capt. Samuel Sprague of Lebanon, Ct. 2. Mehitabel, dau. of the Rev. Moses Hale of Newbury, Ms, June 1, 1780. Levi Frisbie, a Professor in Harv. Univ. was his son.

* Samuel Gray, A. M. the son of Samuel and Lydia (Dyer) Gray, was born at Windham, Ct, June 21, 1751, and died there, Dec. 13, 1836, æ. 85. He read law, practising in Windham; was Assis. Commissary General in the Rev. war to its close; Clerk of the Windham Co. courts for more than 40 years, resigning in 1828. He attended the Commencement at Dart. in 1827, and pointed out the localities of the first rude college structures, with the place for a barbecue on his own graduation. He married Charlotte, dau. of Col. Jedediah Elderkin of Windham, in July 1788.

* Sylvanus Ripley, A. M. the son of Jonathan and Hannah Ripley, was born at Halifax, Ms, Sept. 29, 1749, and died at Hanover, Feb. 5, 1787, æ. 37. He studied divinity with the Rev. Pres. Eleazar Wheelock, D. D. at Hanover; was ordained a missionary in 1772; went as such to the Caghnawagas in Canada; was tutor at Dart. from 1772 to 1782; trustee thereof from 1775 to 1787; became pastor of the College Ch. in 1779, and Phillips Prof. of Theology in 1782, holding the three last positions to the day of his death, which was caused by being thrown from a sleigh and instantly killed. He married Abigail, dau. of Pres. E. Wheelock, John Phillips Ripley, D. C. 1791, and Eleazar Wheelock Ripley, D. C. 1800, were his sons.

* John Wheelock, A. M.–LL. D. the son of the Rev. Pres. Dr Eleazar and Mary (Brinsmaid) Wheelock, was born at Lebanon, Ct, Jan. 28, 1754, and died at Hanover, Apr. 4, 1817, æ. 63. He was tutor at Dart. from 1772 to 1774; represented Hanover in the legislature in 1775; a Major in the N. Y.

State service in 1777; Lt Col. in the Continental Army the same year; became Pres. of Dart. in 1779; also Prof. of Civil and Ecclesiastical History in 1782; visited England for the benefit of the College in 1783; suffered shipwreck, when returning, on Cape Cod; was removed from the Presidency by the trustees in 1815, after 36 years in office. On the controversy between him and them which brought about this result, these sketches will be silent, for many pages would be requisite to give an adequate view of its merits on the one side or the other. Dart. conferred on Pres. Wheelock the honorary degree in 1789. His only publications were a Eulogy on Prof. John Smith, D. D. in 1809, and Sketches of the History of Dartmouth College in 1816. An historical work on which he was engaged for many years has never been printed. A miniature likeness is the only memorial remaining of his appearance, taken when at the age of 29. He married Maria, dau. of Gov. Christian Suhm of St Thomas, W. I. in New Jersey, Nov. 29, 1786. Their only child, Maria Malleville Wheelock, married the Rev. Dr William Allen, late President of Bowdoin College, Me. Eleazar Wheelock and James Wheelock, both D. C. 1776, were his brothers.

She was a Stepdaughter of Boudinot of N.J. – d. at Brunswick, Me., 7o b. 1818 24 buried at Hanover

* Ebenezer Gurley, A. M. the son of Dea. Jonathan and Hannah (Baker) Gurley, was born at Mansfield, Ct, May 25, 1747, and died at Guilford, Vt, July 17, 1776, æ. 29. He studied divinity with a view to a mission among the Indians; but, ill health frustrating the plan, was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Guilford, Oct. 20, 1774; but soon died greatly deplored, and the first victim to mortality among Dartmouth graduates. He married Desire, dau. of Capt. Timothy Dimmick of Mansfield, Royal Gurley, D. C. 1794, was his son.

* Augustine Hibbard, A. M. the son of Dr Joseph and Martha (Smith) Gould Hibbard, was born at Windham, Ct, March 27, 1748, and died at Stanstead, C. E. Dec. 4, 1831, æ. 83. He went on a mission to Canada Indians, but soon returned, was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Claremont, Oct. 20, 1774; was Chaplain of Col. Timothy Bedell's Reg. Rev. army in 1776; also in Gen. John Stark's brigade in 1777; resumed his pastorate in Oct. 1777; was dismissed Dec. 6, 1785. Afterwards removed to Canada East at Stanstead; embarked in secular pursuits; was a magistrate and held other offices under the crown.

From the age of 12 years to manhood, he was with a missionary, the Rev. Ebenezer Moseley, and the Oneidas at Oquago on the Susquehanna, and became master of their language. In May 1773, he went with Sylvanus Ripley, D. C. 1771, and Elisha Porter, D. C. 1773, on a mission to the Caghnawagas, preaching in their vernacular; also in 1774, with Levi Frisbie, D. C. 1771, and Thomas Kendall, D. C. 1773, to the same Indians, those of St Francis and Lorette in Canada; was soon after employed by the Continental Cong. to conciliate the northern tribes in their favour, and when the Rev. war began was (175.) 1. PHELPS, JANES. Joseph Phelps, born May 27, 1758, at Lebanon, Conn., son of Silas Phelps and Hannan Dewey, his wife, married, first, Abigail ——, who died after Nov. 5, 1795. Later he married Cynthia ——, by whom he had a son, Luke Phelps, born in New York State, Oct. 12, 1798, and probably in Oneida County. Joseph Phelps died in Oneida County previous to 1815, and his widow, Cynthia, married as second wife, Judge James Dean about 1816, and survived Judge Dean, whose death occurred in September, 1823, several years. I am told someone has written Janes after Cynthia's name in a Phelps genealogy. Can anyone inform me if this can be Cynthia Janes in the "Janes Family Genealogy," born June 23, 1763, and not disposed of in said work, or has the person marking the Phelps genealogy mixed her with Elizabeth Janes, mother of Silas Phelps above?

ORANGE'S FIRST MINISTER

AN EARLY EXPONENT OF RELIGIOUS LIBERALISM

Rev. Emerson Foster and the Early Trend Towards Universalism—Some Facts Concerning the Founding of Dartmouth College—Probable Origin of the Town Name Orange

[From a Paper read at the Closing Session of Orange's Centennial Celebration, July 6, 1910, by Hosea Starr Ballou]

In the forty or fifty years that I have been familiar with the history of Orange, no one, so far as I know, has undertaken to solve the enigma of the first settled minister, Rev. Emerson Foster. His was an interesting life, if we can uncover its sources and environment, and trace its elusive and tangled threads; and with the exception perhaps of one longer pastorate (Rev. Levi Ballou's), Emerson Foster's pastorate meant more to the town of Orange than that of any other of its ministers.

It is only within a few years that Emerson Foster's birthplace has been known. He was born 152 years ago at Suffield, then in Massachusetts, now in Connecticut, a few miles southwest of Springfield. His father, Rev. Isaac Foster of Rowley, Mass., in 1747 married Elizabeth Emerson of Topsfield, Massachusetts. Their sons Isaac, Dan, Emerson, John and Daniel became ministers.

According to a sermon of Rev. George H. Woodward at Stafford, Conn., in December, 1843, Rev. Isaac Foster was settled at West Stafford, Conn., Oct. 31, 1764. He was the first pastor of that church. For the following fifteen years, nominally a Congregationalist, he appears to have anticipated many of the theological premises of Horace Bushnell and of George A. Gordon. His son Emerson was reared in a liberal religious atmosphere. In 1779 Rev. Isaac Foster was deposed as being a Universalist, and his followers became the nucleus of the Universalist Society at Stafford over which Rev. Hosea Ballou, 2d, was settled thirty-eight years later, on April 3, 1817. Rev. Isaac Foster was apparently interested in Rev. Eleazer Wheelock's famous Indian school at Lebanon, Conn. Probably Emerson studied there, and may have been one of the eighteen white boys who, with Dr. Wheelock's family and six Indians, in 1770, went to Hanover, N. H., and, living in log huts, started Dartmouth College on its most useful and honored career. He was one of six in the third class that graduated, in 1773, and, if the course was four years, he no doubt studied one year at Lebanon before the removal, "to get nearer the Indian settlements." In the Dartmouth class of 1777 was his brother Daniel Foster; and also his second cousin, Joel Foster, who later married his youngest sister, Priscilla Foster, and from 1779 to 1802 was minister at New Salem.

Rev. Emerson Foster's first pastorate so far as we can learn was at North Killingly, Conn., where he was installed on Jan. 22, 1779. He was dismissed a year and a half later, July 27, 1779. In 1780 and 1781 he occupied the pulpit of the First Congregational Church at New London, Conn., "for fifty-eight Sabbaths" (says Calkins's History of New London, page 586), an ancient church, which I understand stood by the first burial ground back on the hill, not far from the famous John Winthrop mill, still the mecca of tourists. When Emerson Foster left New London the society there was considering plans for a new meeting house, hastened no doubt by the burning of the town by the British on Sept. 6, 1781. It is a suggestive coincidence that the new church which they built appears to have been from the same plans as the North Orange church, a two-story structure with three doors of like design and three windows on the second floor front, surmounted by a cupola of the peculiar design with which we are familiar. In substituting for South Warwick the name Orange, is it not a fair and plausible inference, in the absence of any documentary evidence, that the Rev. Emerson Foster's loyalty to his college, and the recollection that not only the Right Honorable William Legge, earl of Dartmouth, but no less a personage than the Prince of Orange, had contributed to its funds, may have prompted him to suggest the honored name of the town? It is not generally known that the first meeting of the trustees of Dartmouth College, on Oct. 22, 1770, was held at Keene. President Eleazer Wheelock was a kinsman of Eleazer Wheelock of Beach Hill, and of Alexander and Timothy Wheelock here, and like them and many of the first settlers of Orange, traced his origin to the old town of Mendon, of which Milford was a part. Born in 1711, at Windham, Conn., President Eleazer Wheelock of Dartmouth College was grandson of Eleazer Wheelock of Mendon. For several years before he secured the New Hampshire charter of the college, he had come under the influence of George Whitefield and "the Great Awakening," and two or three years before Whitefield died at Newburyport, in 1770, he had helped raise £9000 in England and £2529 in Scotland for Wheelock's educational undertaking. The articles of faith which Rev. Emerson Foster drafted for the First church in Orange, in their phraseology as well as in their broad statement of the essentials of Christianity and the omission of theological points which were subjects of bitter controversy, bear a significant resemblance to the creed of the Church of Christ at Dartmouth College.

How early Rev. Emerson Foster first came to Orange we do not certainly know. He was here in 1781, and on Dec. 12, 1782, was installed, his father, the Rev. Isaac Foster of West Stafford, Conn., giving the charge to the pastor. His brother-in-law, Rev. Joel Foster of New Salem, his brother, Rev. Daniel Foster of New Braintree, and Rev. Edward Goddard of Swanzey, [illegible] also had part in the service.

Four years earlier, on Nov. 11, 1778, Emerson Foster had married Miss Margaret Parsons Foote, daughter of Squire Foote of Colchester, Conn., near Lebanon. By the first United States Census of 1790, they had at that time three sons, all under sixteen years of age, and one daughter; and if the order of names is conclusive, they lived near the David Goddard place, on the Athol road. Later two other daughters were born to them, but I believe that only one daughter, Margaret, married and left lineal descendants.

It is difficult at this late date to picture Rev. Emerson Foster, and to make a just estimate of his character and work. He left no portrait, and nothing that he ever wrote is in print. At once, in 1782, he interested himself in education; that year Ebenezer Cheney's son Abner went to Dartmouth College, and graduated in the class of 17[illegible]6, in his twenty-first year. Another Dartmouth student of that period was Calvin Goddard, later a member of Congress and an honored judge of the Supreme Court of Connecticut.

The first few years of Mr. Foster's ministry in Orange appear to have been harmonious and successful. The church was nominally Congregational. But in 1779 his father, Rev. Isaac Foster of West Stafford, Conn., had been deposed as a Universalist, and heresy-hunters here embittered his son's life. They had just driven Mr. Humphrey out of the Athol church for heresy, and were active in nearby towns. At heart and in his intellectual belief, probably Rev. Emerson Foster was a Universalist. He was misunderstood, misrepresented and grossly abused. Charges were brought against him, relating, tradition says, to "heresy, intemperance and light, vain conduct." Finally the church voted to dismiss Mr. Foster, and on or about May 13, 1790, the society gave its assent. It was the result of an unfortunate and bitter "church fight." Ten years later, in 1800, the Universalist General Convention convened here.

Some may question the propriety in this presence of undertaking to vindicate his-retained by the same with the rank of Major, as Agent for Indian affairs and Interpreter, being stationed at Fort Stanwix, N. Y. now Rome. Such was his influence with the Oneidas, that they gave him two square miles of their land, which was at length exchanged for a tract in Westmoreland, and his removal occurred in 1786. Two or three years after this, while living with his wife and two children, 18 Indian chiefs surprised him at midnight, entering the house and telling him that they had come from their Council to take his life in atonement for the murder by an unknown hand of one of their nation, so dooming him the victim. He reasoned with them for a long time against their purpose without avail, and they were about to execute it, when a squaw appeared who had adopted him in his youth, and vehemently protested against their course, then another in like manner, and then a third. Finding their protest produced no effect, they suddenly threw off their blankets, each drew a knife and declared that they would plunge them into their own bosoms if they killed him. The chiefs were dismayed, interpreted it as the voice of the Great Spirit, and desisted. See Tracy's Lectures, from which the above narrative is slightly condensed. The rescued graduate was for many years one of the Judges of Oneida Co. and was twice honoured with a seat in the N. Y. House of Assembly. He was a good scholar and excellent writer. An Essay of his of considerable length on Indian Mythology, once lent to Pres. Dwight of Yale Col. but never returned, is supposed to be lost. He married, 1. James H. Minard of West Newbury possesses two old and interesting pamphlets. One is "A Journal of the Proceedings of the Honorable House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire," which was held in Concord on the third day of June, A. D., 1789, and in the thirteenth year of the independence of America. It contains the proceedings in full written in their quaint style. One thing peculiar is the practice of printing the first word of the page under the last line of the page preceding. The other one, according to its title page is "A Sermon Preached in the Presbyterian Church in Newbury Port, April 7, 1793; Occasioned By The Much Lamented Death of the Rev. John Murray, A. M., Pastor of said Church, Who departed this Life March 13th, 1793, in the 31st year of his age, [Published at the Desire of the Hearers] by James Miltimore, A. M. Pastor of a church in Stratham." The pamphlet also contains the oration which was pronounced at the interment

Connecticut Valley Celebrations

With over 600 Congregational churches looking for opportunities to mark anniversaries either of organization or building, Massachusetts might easily echo the couplet, "Count that day lost," etc., as applying to such celebrations. Just now Colerain is observing its sesquicentennial. It has had a checkered career. Part of the time it has belonged to the Presbyterian fold. Part of the time it has been rent by dissension over the location of the meeting house. Its later days have been more peaceful, especially under the administration of Rev. C. M. Crooks since 1896. He has proved a wise and efficient leader in church and community. The anniversary exercises, Sept. 10, included a valuable historical review by the pastor; sermon by Rev. F. H. Bodman, pastor 1894–96; greetings from the past by Rev. E. M. Frary of Chaplin, Ct. (1888-94), and Dr. S. L. Loomis of Boston, grandson of a former pastor; and neighborhood greetings from the churches of Colerain and vicinity. A notable figure in early days was Rev. Samuel Taggart (1777–1814), who often tried to resign to escape wranglings and secure a living salary promptly paid, but who could never be dismissed, and found financial relief only by serving as a congressman fourteen years during his pastorate.

He was absent-minded and eccentrick, caught flies in prayers at the College Chapel, and being reproved for inattention, vindicated himself by repeating all that had been said in the devotion. His works were, a volume on the Evidences of Christianity; a Tract on Perseverance; numerous sermons, orations, and addresses; also a long account of British Impressments from our marine. MATTOON MEMORIAL

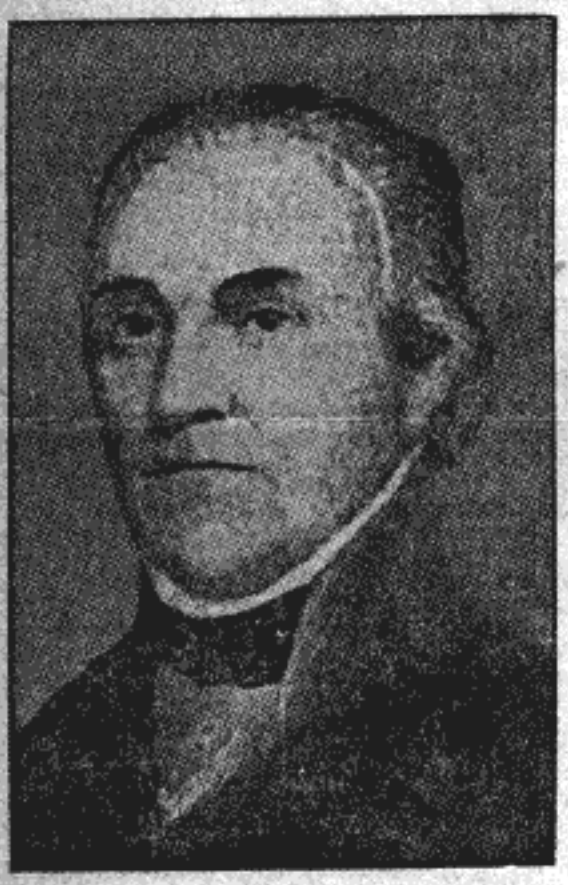
To be Dedicated by Mary Mattoon Chapter, D. A. R.

Amherst's Revolutionary Patriot Figured Prominently in National Affairs.

Ebenezer Mattoon, an Amherst hero of the revolution, in honor of whom the Mary Mattoon chapter, D. A. R., will tomorrow dedicate a tablet set in an ironstone boulder, was born in North Amherst Aug 19, 1755. He was the grandson of Eleazer Mattoon, a deacon of the church, in Northfield, and afterward in Hadley, 3d precinct, now Amherst, and the son of Ebenezer Mattoon, who married Dorothy, the daughter of Dr Nathaniel Smith, the first physician of the town.



EBENEZER MATTOON JR.

Ebenezer Jr traveled on horseback through the woods to Hanover, N H, and in company with 10 Indians entered the class of 1776 in Dartmouth college. In April, 1775, young Ebenezer, when at home on a vacation, enlisted as a private in the company of Capt Reuben Dickinson and spent several weeks in Cambridge with the soldiers. He returned to college and remained until the spring of 1776, his senior year, when he obtained permission of the faculty to go to Canada with the revolutionary army, with the promise of receiving his degree at the end of the year. Young Mattoon received a lieutenant's commission, acted as adjutant, was in St Clair's retreat from Ticonderoga, in the battle of Saratoga at the capture of Burgoyne, and in the battle fought by Gen Sullivan in Rhode Island. He came home in January, 1779, a veteran of the revolution at the age of 23.

July 8, 1779, Mattoon was married to [illegible] the daughter of Noah and Mary [illegible]inson of Ea[illegible] bride-groom became at once an energetic citizen of the town. He represented Amherst in the general court, and in 1782 was made justice of the peace. From the rank of captain he was promoted to major, colonel, brigadier general and major general of the 4th division militia of the commonwealth. In 1792 Gen Mattoon was a member of the electoral college for the reelection of Washington, and in 1796 assisted in the election of Adams. That same year he was appointed high sheriff of old Hampshire county, which included most of western Massachusetts, and this office he held for 20 years. He was a leader in the movement which resulted in the founding of the second church, and was one of its chief supporters.

In 1801 Ebenezer Mattoon was elected to Congress, where in the Jefferson campaign he threw his influence in favor of Aaron Burr, whom he believed to be the better man. In 1816, resigning his commission as major general, he received from Gov John Brooks the appointment of adjutant general, which placed him second in command of all the militia in the state. In 1817 Gen Mattoon was elected captain of the Ancient and Honorable artillery company, which he served until he became totally blind. Even after this affliction he was twice elected a member of the electoral college and in 1820 was a delegate to the convention for amending the constitution.

During these years, largely because of the efforts of his wife, Mary Mattoon, who managed his large estates and took charge of all home interests while her husband was engaged in public affairs, Gen Mattoon had become a wealthy man. The mansion which he built and which was at the time one of the finest houses in town, is still standing. Mary Mattoon died July 30, 1835. The general lived until 1843, a hale and hearty old man. His blindness did not prevent him from making many journeys, in one of which he visited the battlefield of Saratoga and described the scenes of that event as he remembered them. In 1834 he was present at the celebration of its 196th anniversary by the Ancient and Honorable artillery company. In 1839 he visited Dartmouth college, and in 1840, when 85 years old, gave an address on the stage of Amherst college during the Harrison campaign. He died Sept 12, 1843.

The Mary Mattoon chapter, D. A. R., is proud to bear the name of the wife of this hero of the revolution, who was herself a model of all domestic virtues, a veritable New England heroine of the olden time. The unveiling of the tablet bearing the record of his public service tomorrow afternoon will be an occasion of unusual interest in the history of the town.

DEACON JOSEPH LITTLE,

Who died in Newbury, Mass., May 14, aged ninety-four, was the oldest resident of the town. He was deacon in the First Church about forty years. Nearly a half-century ago he represented his town in the Legislature several terms, and had ever been a leading and honored citizen. He resided on the farm which had been in possession of the family since the first settlement in 1635, and was of the sixth generation. His father was Rev. Silas Little (Dartmouth College, 1776). All who ever knew Deacon Little would bear willing testimony to his upright Christian character. His wife survives him at the age of ninety-four. Born on adjoining farms they were playmates in childhood and loving companions in youth, middle life and old age, and their career strikingly illustrates the beauty of happy, wedded Christian lives—one in thought, purpose and deed. Their church and married life began almost simultaneously and extended over a period of nearly seventy-two years. They outlived all their contemporaries, retaining their remarkably strong religious convictions and mental faculties throughout. Their eight children all grew to manhood and womanhood, four of whom survive.

Thomas Porter of Cornwall, Ct, and sister of the Rev. Dr Ebenezer Porter, D. C. 1792, of And. Theo. Seminary. Isaac and Jeremiah Osborn, D. C. 1779, and Jacob Osborn, D. C. 1784, were his brothers.

* DAVENPORT PHELPS, A. M. the son of Col. Alexander and Theodora (Wheelock) Phelps, and grandson of Pres. Eleazar Wheelock, was born at Hebron, Ct, in 1755, and died at Pulteneyville, N. Y. June 27, 1813, Æ. 58. His course for some time after graduation is unknown. He studied divinity; took orders in the Prot. Epis. Ch. and was a pioneer missionary in Western N. Y. organizing several churches there. Ralph Phelps, D. C. 1794, was his brother.

* SAMUEL STEBBINS, A. M. the son of —— and Sarah Stebbins, was born at Wilbraham, Ms, and died at Simsbury, Ct, Jan. 20. 1821, Æ. 69. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Simsbury, Dec. 10, 1777; dismissed Nov. 17, 1806; but there continued to reside. He married Ursula, dau. of Edward Griswold of Windsor, Ct. His mother was three times married, 1. to a Jones; 2. a Stebbins; 3. a Brewer,

* ABEL CURTIS, A. M. the son of Simeon and Sarah (Hutchinson) Curtis, was born at Lebanon, Ct, June 13, 1755, and died at Norwich, Vt, Oct. 1, 1783, Æ. 28. He settled in Norwich as a farmer, and was also a Judge of a County court. He married Kezia Brown of Norwich, May 12. 1779

* EXPERIENCE ESTABROOK, A. M. the son of Joseph and Rebecca (Porter) Estabrook, was born at ~~East Haddam, Ct, or~~ Rehoboth, Ms, and died at Bath, in Feb. 1799, Æ. 44. He studied divinity; was ordained first pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Thornton, Aug. 23, 1780; dismissed Dec. 26, 1786; installed pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Plainfield, Meriden Soc. June 6, 1787; dismissed May 7, 1792, but continued to officiate there for some time after. He married Jedidah Willey.

* CALEB JEWETT, A. M. the son of James and Martha (Scott) Jewett, was born at Newbury, Ms, and died at Gorham, Me, Apr. 16, 1802, Æ. 49. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Gorham, Nov. 5, 1783; ceased preaching without being formally dismissed, in 1800. His health was bad and death soon ensued. He married Betsey Bacon of Bradford, Ms, in Nov. 1783.

* SILAS LITTLE, A. M. the son of Henry and Lydia (Little) Little, was born at Newbury, Ms, Mar. 4, 1754, and died there, Oct. 6, 1845, Æ. 91. He studied divinity; preached some time; but finally gave up the vocation, settling as a farmer in his native town; became a magistrate and represented Newbury in the Mass. Legislature. His age was venerable and his character unblemished. He married Lucretia Little, Sept. 28, 1786,

* STEPHEN MARCH, A. M. the son of Col. Clement and Eleanor (Veasey) March, was born at Greenland, June 16, 1756, and died at Chilicothe, Ohio, Sept. 12, 1818, Æ. 62. He went early to Union, Me; settled as a farmer; taught a school at times, and was a magistrate; removed to Chilicothe about 1816. He married ~~the dau.~~ of Col. John Robinson, Nov. 24. 1789

* EBENEZER MATTOON, A. M. the son of Ebenezer and Dorothy (Smith) Mattoon, was born at Amherst, Ms, Aug. 19, 1755, and died there, Sept. 11. 1843, Æ. 88. He early entered the Rev. army as a Major, serving with distinction under Gen. Horatio Gates, at Saratoga and other battles; returned to Amherst, after the struggle, and there closed his honoured life. He was a delegate from Amherst to two Conventions, in 1776 and 1779; represented it in 1781, 1794, 1812, and 1820; was also in the Senate, and a member of Congress from 1801 to 1803; High Sheriff of the old Co. of Hampshire for many years, and a Maj. General of the Mass. militia for a long period. The writer was at his house when it was the home of three Ebenezer Mattoon's; his father, who died Apr. 27, 1806, himself, and grandson, and on Feb. 19, 1814, the birth of a great grandson made the fourth of the same name in direct succession. For some years preceding his death, the good old General was totally blind. He married Mary, dau. of Noah Dickinson of Amherst, July 7, 1779. Noah Dickinson Mattoon, D. C. 1803, was his son.

* JOHN SAMUEL SHERBURNE, A. M. the son of John and Elisabeth (Moffat) Sherburne, was born at Portsmouth in 1757, and died there, Aug. 2, 1830, Æ. 73. He read law, settling in practice at Portsmouth; was a member of Congress from 1793 to 1797; Atty of the U. S. District Court of N. H. from 1801 to 1804; Judge of the same from May 1804 to his death. He had lost one of his lower limbs in the Rev. war. He married Submit, dau. of the Hon George Boyd of Portsmouth, in Oct. 1791.

* JONATHAN SHERBURNE, the son of the Hon. Henry and Sarah (Warner) Sherburne, was born at Portsmouth, and died there, Jan. 3, 1847, Æ. 89. His occupations through life have not been ascertained. He married Nancy Perkins of Rye.

* ELEAZAR WHEELOCK, A. M. the son of the Rev. Pres. Dr Eleazar and Mary (Brinsmaid) Wheelock, was born at Lebanon, Ct, Aug. 17, 1756, and died at Boat Run, Ohio, 16 miles above Cincinnati, Dec. 7, 1811, Æ. 55. He was a merchant in Hanover; but becoming embarrassed in business emigrated to Ohio about 1805. While in the act of felling a tree, he was seized with a third shock of apoplexy, and in a few moments expired in the arms of his wife, who saw his fall and flew to his assistance. He married, 1. Tryphena, dau. of Samuel Young, of Lisbon, Ct. 2. Thankful Pennock. Pres. John Wheelock, D. C. 1771, and James Wheelock of this class, were his brothers.

* JAMES WHEELOCK, A. M. the brother of the preceding, was born at Lebanon, Ct, Mar. 5, 1759, and died at Burlington, Vt, Jan. 14, 1835, Æ. 75. He was resident of the college vicinage the most of his life, and a magistrate of the Co. of Grafton, but eventually removed to Burlington, where two daughters resided, successively the wives of the Rev. Dr James Marsh, D. C. 1817. He married, 1. ~~Catharine~~, dau. of Doct. Gideon Tiffany of Hanover. 2. Abigail, dau. of Col. Aaron Kinsman of Hanover. James Ripley Wheelock, D. C. 1807, was his son.

* LEVI WILLARD, the son of Col. Oliver and Thankful (Doolittle) Willard, was born at Hartland, Vt, and died at Sheldon, Vt, in Oct. 1839, Æ. 80. He went early to Montreal, E. C. espousing the British cause and being employed in the commissary department; engaged after the war in the Fur Company, and for several years led a wandering life among savages and trappers. Traditions have it, that previous to this he had married Jane Dailly of Montreal, said to be an accomplished Irish lady; but returning there had been informed of her unfaithfulness and departure for Hartland. Arriving there and finding the report confirmed, he walked his room in agony all night, and found in the morning that his hair had become prematurely gray. After this, he taught school some time at Richford, Vt, but at length repaired to Sheldon, where a daughter resided, and there this unhappy man, from being first scholar in his class, descended to his grave in painful humiliation and obscurity.

* SOLOMON WOLCOTT was born at Windsor, Ct, but parentage, birth, and death have passed into oblivion. His history is, however, partially unfolded.

Dear Mrs Comstock

Pres. Eleazer[4] Wheelock of Dart. Coll. had a son Eleazer[5] Wheelock whose second wife was Thankful Pennock. By her he had several children, who lived at his death in Ohio, just above Cincinnati on the Ohio river with her. I want her parentage.

I think she was a daughter of a very early settler of Strafford Vt, James Pennock.

Your Orange Co probate records at Chelsea should disclose whether his daughters married Eleazer[5] Wheelock.

Her descendants went to Texas & the middle west; and I have got a lot of them located.

Can you help me in this matter.

Yours very truly

Gilman D. Frost

I have read Hemingway's Vt records about Wheelocks. We have the 5 volumes & index in Baker Liby.

* GAMALIEL EWER, the son of the Rev. Nathaniel and Drusilla (Covell) Ewer, was from Newmarket, and died at his father's house in Newmarket, within a year or two after graduation, at the age of 24. He designed the ministry, and was reputed to be a young man of much promise. He was starred in the Triennial of 1786.

* DANIEL FOSTER, A. M. the son of Nathan and Elisabeth (Lanesford) Foster, was born at Stafford, Ct, in 1751, and died at New Braintree, Ms, Sept. 4, 1795, æ. 44. He studied divinity; was ordained colleague pastor of the Rev. Benjamin Ruggles over the Cong. Ch. at New Braintree, Oct. 29, 1778. The State Election Sermon was preached by him in 1790. His death occurred while in office, and his mental powers and attainments were highly esteemed. He married Elisabeth, dau. of Reuben Reed of Warren, Ms. Joel Foster of this class and John Foster, D. C. 1783, were his brothers.

* JOEL FOSTER, A. M. the son of Nathan and Elisabeth (Lanesford) Foster, was born at Stafford, Ct, Apr. 8, 1755, and died at East Sudbury, now Wayland, Ms, Sept. 24, 1812, æ. 57. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at New Salem, Ms, June 9, 1779; dismissed June 21, 1802; installed pastor of the Cong. Ch. at East Sudbury, Sept. 7, 1803, and died in office. Some of his occasional Sermons were published, also a "Literary Correspondence" between him and Hosea Ballou, the Universalist. He married Priscilla, dau. of the Rev. Isaac Foster of Stafford. Daniel Foster of this class and John Foster, D. C. 1783, were his brothers.

* DAVID GOODALL, A. M. the son of Nathan and Persis (Whitney) Goodall, was born at Marlborough, Ms, Aug. 14, 1749, and died at Littleton, Mar. 4, 1830, Æ. 80. He studied divinity with the Rev. Benjamin Brigham of Fitzwilliam; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Halifax, Vt, in 1781; dismissed in 1796; then moved to Littleton, becoming a farmer and preaching at times; also represented it ~~5 years~~ 1799-1-2-3-4-5-6-9-11-13 in the legislature. He married Elisabeth, dau. of Dr Brigham, Dec. 27, 1778.

Son of Samuel & Abiah

* EBENEZER HASELTINE, was born at Methuen, Ms, Oct. 28, 1755, and died at Epsom, Nov. 10 1813, Æ. 58. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Epsom, Jan. 21, 1784, and so closed his life after a ministry of 29 years. Two sermons were published by him, one to "Young People;" another at the ordination of David Lawrence Morrill at Goffstown. He married Margaret, dau. of Major Andrew M'Clary, who fell at the battle of Bunker Hill.

* SOLOMON HOWE, was born at North Brookfield, Ms, Sept. 14, 1750, and died at New Salem, Ms, Nov. 18, 1835, Æ. 85. He lived in his native town some time after graduation, also in several other places in Ms, terminating in New Salem. His life was eccentrick and desultory, sometimes a preacher, at others a printer, but farming was his main occupation. A hymn book, wholly or partly composed by him, may be seen in the American Antiquarian Library at Worcester, Ms. He was a married man, and left descendants.

2 * WALTER LYON, A. M. the son of Samuel and —— (Paine) Lyon, was born at Woodstock, Ct, Sept. ~~28~~, 1757, and died at Pomfret, Ct, Feb. 11, 1826, Æ. 68. He studied divinity with the Rev. Dr Levi Hart of Preston, Ct; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Abington parish in Pomfret, Jan. 1, 1783, where his ministry existed until death, 43 years. He married Mary, dau. of Capt. William Huntington of Lebanon, Ct, at L. Sept. 1, 1785. and Rebeca (Huntington)

One son, Samuel Huntington.

* WINSLOW PACKARD, A. M. the son of Capt. Joseph Packard, was born at Bridgewater, Ms, in 1751, and died at Wilmington, Vt, Oct. 12, 1784, Æ. 33. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Wilmington, July 3, 1781, dying in little more than three years after enjoying a very extensive revival of religion, with large accessions to his church. He married Abigail, dau. of Capt. Judah Moore, the father of the Rev. Dr Zephaniah Swift Moore, D. C. 1793, the Pres. of both Williams and Amherst Colleges, who survived him and married successively the Rev. Edmund Mills of Sutton, Ms, and the Rev. Dr Nathaniel Emmons of Franklin, Ms.

* DANIEL SIMON, A. M. was a Narragansett Indian. He studied divinity; was ordained at Hanover, as an Evangelist; soon went to Stockbridge, Ms, to teach the Indians there. On Oct. 7, 1778, he wrote the following curious epistle to Pres. Eleazar Wheelock; "I have been preaching some about the country since I left college. Do not engage long at a place on the account I am young in the ministry. I am at present keeping school at Stockbridge, where I have thirty and forty in my school, and sometimes fifty. I began my school on the first of May and engaged for five months; have preached some in the towns round about and supplied the pulpit of the great and good Mr West, in his absence, two Sabbaths. But Mr West and I am not familiar, by reason I find, that I am in or near the centre of Gravity. It is not allowed for a sinner to pray here, because all things are ordained of God, and neither can the sinner change the counsel of the Divine Being by prayer. But I may say this, that some people's God is my devil." When Stockbridge was left is not known, but he went as a missionary to the Indians at Cranbery, N. J. in 1783, and was not long after suspended from the ministry on a charge of intemperance. This is our last trace of him. He was first starred in the Triennial of 1807.

* GEORGE TRIMBLE, the son of Alexander and Sarah (M'Glaughy) Trimble, was born at Montgomery, N. Y. Feb. 5, 1760, and died at Crown Point, N. Y. Jan. 6, 1797, Æ. 36. On leaving college, he entered the Rev. army in the Commissary department; on the war ending, was appointed Agent by the Government to conclude a treaty with the Lake George Indians. About this period, he purchased 6000 acres of land around Crown Point, and erected the first mills at Ticonderoga, N. Y. becoming a merchant there. Under these circumstances, his property largely accumulated. His reputation was of a high order, and his civil station was that of a Judge of the Essex Co. Court to his decease in the prime of life at Crown Point, his last residence. He married Mary, dau. of James W. Cobb, of Montgomery, in 1792.

* LABAN AINSWORTH, A. M. the son of Capt. William and Mary (Marcy) Ainsworth, was born at Woodstock, Ct, July 19, 1757, and died at Jaffrey, Mar. 17, 1858. Æ. 100 ys, 7 mo. and 28 dys. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Jaffrey, Dec. 10, 1782, remaining such until his death, a ministry of over 75 years. Three colleagues were settled during his pastorate, viz. on Jan. 11, 1832, May 3, 1837, and Apr. 19, 1845; but still, his labours were continued and his faculties retained to a very few years prior to his departure. He was a man of great humour and a preacher of more than ordinary ability; in person, of medium stature, thick set, good features, and well formed, except a hand disabled by early sickness. On the anniversary of his 100th birthday, the church services, commemorative thereof, were attended in person. While at Hanover, when the battle of Bunker Hill was fought, his attention was directed to the report of cannon by the Indian, Daniel Simons, D. C. 1777, who perceived it when lying on the ground, his ear being in contact. He married Mary, dau. of Jonas Minot of Concord, Ms, Dec. 4, 1787. William Ainsworth, D. C. 1811, was his son, Frederick Smith Ainsworth, D. C. 1840, his grandson, and Andrew Ainsworth, D. C. 1794, his brother.

The year of his death, 1858, was remarkable for closing the lives of the following Dartmouth Graduates,

Laban Ainsworth,	class	1775,	Æ.	100	yrs,	7	mo.	28 dys.
Zachariah Green,	"	1781,	"	98	"	5	"	10 "
Ethan Osborn,	"	1784,	"	99	"	8	"	10 "
John Sawyer,	"	1785,	"	103	"	0	"	5 "
Lincoln Ripley,	"	1796,	"	96	"	8	"	27 "

The first four averaging 100 ys, 5 mo. and 13 dys each, and the whole five 99 ys, 10 mo. and 16 dys each. Such longevity as this, in the course of a single year of mortality, is unexampled and approachable only at a great disparity in the history of any of our colleges. It is also worthy of remark that all the above were ministers of the gospel of Christ.

* ELI BRIGHAM, A. M. the son of Jonas and Persis Brigham, was born at Westborough, Ms, May 17, 1752. On leaving Dart. he embarked in mercantile business at Lancaster, Ms, pursuing it for about 8 years. Not long after this, he called on a brother at Bakersfield, Vt, on his way to Canada, having goods in possession. Thence he took the ice on Lake Champlain, and was never heard from afterwards by his friends, leaving them to believe that he must have perished on or beneath the lake.

The Benj. Burt mentioned in margin below could not have been the graduate. Did he come from Longmeadow? The compiler of the Burt Genealogy has no clue to him.

ELIJAH BRIGHAM, A. M. the son of Col. Levi and Susannah (Grout) Brigham, was born at Westborough, Ms, July 7, 1751, and died at Washington, D. C. Feb. 22, 1816, Æ. 64. He began the study of divinity, but soon relinquished it, going into mercantile business at Westborough; was 12 years a member of the State Senate; 2 years of the Executive Council; 16 years a judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and 6 years a member of Congress from 1810 to 1816, dying while in the discharge of his official duties. He married, Anna Sophia, dau. of the Rev. Ebenezer Parkman of Westborough, Sept. 21, 1780. 2. Sarah Hammock, a widow lady, Apr. 20, 1786. 3. * MOSES BRIGHAM, A. M. the son of Moses and Mehitabel (Grout) Brigham, was born at Westborough, Ms, May 31, 1753, and died at Delaware, C. W. Aug. 13, 1814, Æ. 61. He was a merchant at Hanover on the college plain for many years; but, not succeeding in his affairs, removed to Delaware, on the river Thames, where his attention was given to landed speculations. He married, 1. Wealthy Johnson, at Lebanon, Ct, Sept. 9, 1781. 2. Lucinda, dau. of Dr Gideon Tiffany of Hanover, in 1795.

* EBENEZER BROWN. His parentage, birth, and birthplace are not known, but he died at Norwich, Vt, May 10, 1830, Æ. 80. He studied divinity; preached for a time at Bethel, Vt, but was never ordained, and leaving that pursuit soon settled in Norwich as a farmer, and there attained an advanced age. He married Patience, dau. of Samuel Bell of Norwich.

* BENJAMIN BURT. He is supposed to have been born in Longmeadow, Ms, and is known to have entered college with a view to the ministry. Death, however, soon put a period to his anticipation. He was first starred in the Triennial of 1786.

* NEHEMIAH FINN. He is thought to have originated in Salem County, N. J. where the name abounded. He certainly went to that State, as a letter from Joseph Grover, D. C. 1773, dated at Patterson, N. J. in May 1778, is indorsed by "Mr Finn." His classmate, Ainsworth, spoke of him as possessed of brilliant talents. He was first starred in the Triennial of 1786.

* DAVID FOOT, A. M. the son of Asa and Jerusha (Carter) Foot, was born at Colchester, Ct, Oct. 5, 1760, and died at Rye, N. Y. Aug. 1, 1793, Æ. 32. He studied theology; took both deacon's and priest's orders in the Episcopal Ch. probably from the Right Rev. Samuel Seabury, D. D. Bishop of Connecticut; was officiating at Hebron, Ct, in 1791, and afterwards became rector of the church at Rye, where he soon died.

* EBENEZER JOHNSON. The Antiquarian, Farmer, says, "He was from Ellington, Ct; taught school a number of years, and removed to the westward." It is more probable that he was from Willington, Ct.

* ABRAHAM JONES, the son of Col. Ezra and Elisabeth (Jennison) Jones, was born at Barre, Ms, and died there July, 1790, Æ. 29. John Jones, D. C. 1779, was his brother.

* JOSIAH KILBURN, A. M. the son of Josiah Kilburn, was born at Hebron, Ct, Oct. 13, 1752, and died while on a journey at Gilsum, Sept. 1781, Æ. 28. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Chesterfield, Ms, Nov. 9, 1780, but survived less than a year from that date. He married, Temperance, dau. of Ebenezer Dewey of Gilsum,

* JOSEPH MOTTEY, A. M. the son of Joseph and Hannah (Ingalls) Mottey, was born at Salem, Ms, May 14, 1756, and died at Lynnfield, Ms, July 9, 1821, Æ. 65. He was assistant teacher in both Phillips and Dummer Academies at Andover and Byfield, Ms; then, having studied divinity, was ordained pastor of the 2nd Cong. Ch. in Lynn, now the 1st ch. in Lynnfield, Sept. 24, 1783, where he remained until death, a ministry of 37 years. His publications were four occasional sermons and addresses, and an article on Original Sin in the Christian Disciple for 1820. His father was from the island of Jersey in the British Channel, whose original name, La Mottais, was here Anglicized to Mottey. He, the son, married Eliza Moody of York, Me, at Byfield, Apr. 12, 1780, who d. 27 Aug. 1787 ae 32

* SALMON RICHARDSON, A. M. the son of Major James and Hannah Richardson, was born at Leominster, Ms, Jan. 30, 1761. He taught in Leominster, Swanzey, Putney, Vt, and then removed to Durham, C. E. where he paid the great debt of nature, but when is unknown. He married Lucy, dau. of Jonas Kendall of Leominster, May 23, 1781. v. Richardson Mem., p. 617

* NATHANIEL SMITH. He was the grandson of Nathaniel Smith of Middleborough, Ms, who wrote Pres. Eleazar Wheelock in 1774, proposing to give 100 acres of land in Cornwall, Ct, for his grandson's education. And this is all we know of the graduate.

* JOSEPH VAILL, the son of Capt. Joseph and Jerusha (Peck) Vaill, was born at Litchfield, Ct, July 3, 1750, and died at Killingworth, Ct, Nov. 21, 1838, Æ. 88. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Hadlyme, Ct, Feb. 9, 1780, and so continued to his death, 58 years after. His publications were a poem, "Noah's Flood," of about 550 lines, and a sermon preached at the ordination of his son, Joseph Vaill. The Rev. Isaac Parsons of East Haddam, Ct, published his memoirs in a vol. of 236 pages, containing interesting incidents of his college life. He married Sarah, dau. of the Rev. Joseph Fowler, Oct. 12, 1780.

He studied medicine; removed early to Georgia and became successful and distinguished in his profession, attending also to the raising of cotton. He married Dolly Owen of Hebron.

* ISAAC OSBORN, A. M. the son of Benjamin Osborn, was born at Litchfield, Ct, July 22, 1744, and died there, Mar. 25, 1826, Æ. 81. He studied divinity and preached several years without being ordained; then became a semi-Methodist, Quaker, and Baptist; next fell into a great mental hallucination lasting a year, during which he fasted 14, 20, and even 40 days, persuaded that so doing he could raise the dead. But failing in the attempt to revive his buried wife, he recovered his reason; was a deacon in the 1st Cong. Ch. highly esteemed for his piety, zeal, and gifts; and although again afflicted with the like complaint, his sun went down at last without a cloud, himself being greatly beloved and lamented. The name of his wife has not been obtained. Benjamin Osborn, D. C. 1775, Jeremiah Osborn of this class, and Jacob Osborn, D. C. 1784, were his brothers.

* JEREMIAH OSBORN, A. M. the brother of the preceding, was born at Litchfield, Ct, Apr. 23, 1741, and died there, Sept. 13, 1829, Æ. 88. He was a volunteer in the Rev. army and was present at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne. After leaving college, he passed the rest of his life at Litchfield; studied all the liberal professions and some others; was an astronomer, botanist, chemist, mathematician, metaphysician, philosopher, poet, inventor, mechanick, politician, and Christian; devised theories on the Divine government, particularly on the origin of sin, theories which theologians were slow to accept, and that were not fully accepted by himself; reviewed "Edwards on the Will" and his brother Benjamin's "Truth Displayed." Many labour saving machines were also invented by him. Though thus busy and multifarious in his occupations, he was for many years a member of the 1st Cong. Ch. in Litchfield, and was regarded as a truly pious man. He married the dau. of Capt. Joseph Vaill of Litchfield and sister of Joseph Vaill, D. C. 1778, but had no offspring.

* JONATHAN WILKINS, A. M. the son of Josiah and Lois (Bush) Wilkins, was born at Marlborough, Ms, June 19, 1755, and died at Concord, May 9, 1830, Æ. 74. He studied divinity, and, preaching, received a call to be pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Concord, Dec. 17, 1786; this invitation was declined; but he took up his permanent residence there as a merchant and farmer, maintaining through life a high character in town and church. He married Sarah, dau. of Jeremiah Hall of Concord in 1787.

* SAMUEL WOOD, A. M.–D. D. the son of Joseph and Ellen (Palmer) Wood, was born at Mansfield, Ct, May 11, 1752, and died at Boscawen, Dec. 24, 1836, Æ. 84. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Boscawen, Oct. 17, 1781, a position admirably sustained for 55 years and only closed by the hand of death. Dr. Wood instructed many young men in theology, and prepared 80 pupils for college, among whom were Daniel, D. C. 1801, and Ezekiel, Webster, D. C. 1804. Dart. conferred his doctorate in 1820. His publications were; the Valedictory Address delivered at his graduation at

* Amos Chase, A. M. the son of Moses and Hannah (Brown) Chase, was born at Sutton, Ms, May 19, ~~1757~~ 1760, and died at Centreville, Oil Creek township, Crawford Co. Pa, Dec. 25, 1849, æ. ~~92~~ 89. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the 2nd Cong. Ch. at Litchfield, Ct, June 27, 1787; dismissed in 1814; then removed to Centreville, where he occupied a farm and preached in vacant churches. He married, 1. Rebecca, dau. of Dr Hart. 2. Joanna Lanman, who died at Centreville, Aug. 19, 1848, æ. 81. Moses Chase, D. C. 1797, was his brother.

* Edward Longfellow, A. M. the son of Edward and Joanna (Short) Longfellow, was born at Newbury, Byfield parish, Ms, Aug. 25, 1758, and died there, Sept. 6, 1794, æ. 36. His life was devoted to teaching. He was also the Capt. of a company in the expedition against the rebel, Daniel Shays.

* Noah Miles, A. M. the son of Noah and Huldah (Hosmer) Miles, was born in Westminster, Ms, Dec. 22, 1751, and died at Temple, Nov. 20, 1831, æ. 79. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Temple, Oct. 2, 1782, dying in office after a ministry of 49 years. His only known publication was a Eulogy on Washington. He married —— Pearson of Newburyport, Ms.

* William Patten, A. M.–D. D. the son of the Rev. William and Ruth (Wheelock) Patten, and grandson of Pres. Eleazar Wheelock, was born at Halifax, Ms, in 1763, and died at Hartford, Ct, Mar. 9, 1839, æ. 76. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Newport, R. I. May 24, 1786; dismissed after 46 years Apr. 8, 1833. His publications were, a sermon given the Sunday after his ordination; others, on the Slave Trade; on Christianity, the true Religion, against Paine; on the death of Pres. Stiles; on that of Isaac Senter; before the African Benevolent Society; also a vol. on the Life of his mother. Brown Univ. conferred the D. D. He married Hannah Hurlbut of New London, Ct.

* George Peirce, A. M. the son of Nathaniel and Ann (Jaffrey) Peirce, was born at Portsmouth about 1760, and died there, May 26, 1788, æ. 28. He read law, and began practice at Portsmouth, but early fell a prey to consumption.

* Absalom Peters, A. M. the son of John and Lydia (Phelps) Peters, was born at Hebron, Ct, Mar. 5, 1754, and died in N. Y. city, Mar. 20, 1840, æ. 86. He settled as a farmer in Wentworth; served in the Rev. war as aid to Major Gen. Bailey; was a member in the Convention of the N. H. grants in 1781; also for 6 sessions in the Vt. Leg. while claiming those grants; afterwards a member of the N. H. legislature, the High Sheriff of his county, and a Brigadier Gen. of the state militia. He married, 1. Mary, dau. of Nathaniel Rogers of Leominster, Ms, in 1782. 2. Mary, dau. of Dea. Pelatiah Porter *3122. 3. Stewart. H. F. A., Feb. 26, 1913. The fact that Benjamin Stewart was "of Weymouth" at the time of his publishment to Patience Andrews at Ipswich, Feb. 6, 1719-20, furnishes the only suggestion in regard to his origin, I have been able to discover.

There was a James Stewart in Weymouth in 1669, and probably earlier, who married Anna, daughter of Elder Edward Bates. He is described as "Master of John Bicknell's sloop" in 1674, of which Joseph Ludden was mate. He served in King Philip's War in 1676, and his son, James, is named in the will of "Alen Duglen," a Weymouth Scotchman, who was killed in that war. His house was bought in 1680 for the use of the schoolmaster, for £40. His name appears in the land records, only as a witness to deeds by Weymouth and Hingham people as late as 1691, which is probably the approximate date of his death. No record of his estate is found . The births of four children are recorded: Susanna (2) born May 23, 1669, married, June 13, 1692, Luke Short of Marblehead and settled in Middleboro, had a number of children: James (2), born June 26, 1672, later history unknown; John (2), born Jan. 22, 1674, later history unknown; Hannah (2), born Sept. 23, 1683, married, Sept. 9, 1703, David Thomas of Middleboro, and died May 9, 1704. The Mary Stewart who married Jonathan Thomas of Middleboro, on the same day that Hannah (2), married, was, doubtless, also a daughter of James and Anna. If there is any truth in the tradition that Abigail, wife of Samuel Cobb of Middleboro, was a Stewart, she probably belonged in this family. Benjamin and Patience (Andrews) Stewart lived in Gloucester for many years prior to their removal to Upton, but I have no record of the births of their six children, who were: Patience, who married, Jan. 4, 1736-7, John Watkins at Upton; Susanna, born 1725, married, March 20, 1743-4, Stephen Rolph of Grafton, and lived in Mendon and Princeton, Mass.; Joseph, who married, 1752, Jane Wilson, and died 1759, leaving a son Joseph, who graduated at Dartmouth, and a daughter Submit, who died unmarried in New Braintree; Benjamin, born 1730, married Deborah Rider of Holliston, and had Asenath, who married Silas Wood, and Anna, who married Joseph Smith, both lived in Chesterfield, N. H.; Lucy, who married, May 10, 1757, John Wilson; and James, born 1735, who married, 1761, Mrs. Lois (Adams) Allen of Medway and lived in New Braintree and South Brimfield (now Wales), leaving numerous descendants.

The loss of the early Weymouth records may prevent any proof of Benjamin's parentage being found, and it is impossible to say whether he was a son or a grandson of James and Anna. G. S. S.

* Peter Pohquonnoppeet, was an Indian of the Stockbridge tribe, born at Stockbridge, Ms. He was possessed of good talents and sustained an unblemished character. Through life, he was called "Sir" Peter, the prefix at that time given to the Seniors at Dartmouth. After graduation, he became a teacher and was also a deacon in the Cong. Ch. of the Rev. Dr Stephen West, composed of both whites and Indians. In 1789, he emigrated with the tribe to New Stockbridge, Oneida Co. N. Y. and continued as he had been before one of their chiefs. Here a collision occurred between a party devoted to him, and one attached to Capt. Hendrick Aupaumut, another chief. The result will now be given in the language of Levi Konkapot Jr, who writes from Stockbridge, Wisc. under the date of Sept. 22, 1858. "It is said that the spirit of party became so enkindled, that certain individuals of the opposition began to be jealous of his growing power, influence, respectability, and fame. And in consequence, secret orders were issued to put an end to his life by poison. At what age and in what year he died, we (L. K.) are not informed." And then the writer bursts into a panegyrick of truly Indian enthusiasm; "Thus came to his untimely end, in the midst of usefulness, in the midst of a bright career, in the midst of progression, one of the most intellectual, honoured, illustrious, talented, and learned of men of which this tribe can boast. Had he been permitted to prolong his existence, it cannot be divined what progress he might have made in the path of human glory." Such is the close of this very creditable, though sanguine letter, and we may well regret that a native civilian of remarkable promise was tragically deprived of the opportunity to show us the extent of Indian capabilities. He was first starred in the Triennial of 1810.

* John Rolphe was from Mass, and died at Sheldon, N. Y. in 1819, æ. 66. He studied divinity; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at South Bristol, N. Y. Jan. 12, 1797; dismissed Oct. 9, 1800. As he was ultimately deposed from the ministry, we are led to infer some defect of character.

* Joseph Steward, A. M. the son of Joseph and Mary (Wilson) Steward, was born at Upton, Ms, Aug. 6, 1752, and died at Hartford, Ct, Apr. 16, 1822, æ. 69. He studied divinity with the Rev. Dr Levi Hart of Preston, Ct; was ordained an evangelist and preached extensively in New England; received several pressing invitations to settle that were declined from the ill-health which at length laid him aside. He then devoted himself to painting under the guidance of Col. John Trumbull, attaining a good degree of excellence in portraits and fancy pieces. It was by him that Pres. Eleazar Wheelock's likeness was painted, taken from memory some years after the good man's death, and the features are said to be well executed. It is now, in the College Library, as is also his portrait of the Hon. John Phillips, a college trustee and benefactor. Being among his earliest efforts, he used to call them, facetiously, his "evil deeds." The museum at Hartford was established by him and kept for many years. After the death of the Rev. Dr Nathan Strong of Hartford, his pulpit was supplied by him for two years. A Thanksgiving sermon preached in that time was published in 1810. His whole life was eminently good and irreproachable. He married Sarah, dau. of the Rev. Samuel Moseley of Hampton parish, Windham, Ct.

* Daniel Storey, A. M. the son of William and Joanna (Appleton) Storey, was born at Boston, Ms, July 29, 1756, and died at Marietta, Ohio, Dec. 30, 1804, æ. 48. He studied divinity; preached as a licentiate in Concord in 1786, at Beverly, Ms, in 1787, and at Worcester, Ms, in 1789; went thence, at the instance of the Ohio company, to Marietta, as a chaplain; was very successful there as both a missionary and teacher; gathered a church in 1796; but, there being then no ministers in that region to ordain him, returned to New England, and was ordained at Danvers, Ms, pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Marietta, Aug. 15, 1797. Going home, he officiated as such until dismissed at his own request, owing to ill health, Mar. 15, 1804, dying of his complaints the same year. He is supposed to have been the first to preach the gospel in Ohio. He never married. The distinguished Judge of the U. S. Supreme Court, Joseph Story, was his nephew.

* JOHN BRUCE, A. M. the son of William and Abigail (Kendall) Bruce, was born at Marlborough, Ms, Aug. 31, 1757, and died at Mont Vernon, Mar. 12, 1809, Æ. 51. He studied divinity, was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Mont Vernon, Nov. 3, 1785, a position retained to his death, 23 years after. He married Lois, dau. of Josiah Wilkins of Marlborough, Dec. 15, 1785.

* ZACHARIAH GREENE, the son of Samuel and Jane (White) Greene, was born at Stafford, Ct, Jan. 11, 1760, and died at Hampstead, Long Island, N. Y. June 20, 1858, Æ. 98 years, 5 months, and 9 days. He was in the Rev. army in 1775 at Dorchester Heights in Ms; at the battle of White Plains, N. Y. in 1776; at that of Whitemarsh in 1777, where he was wounded and left the service. Leaving college, he studied divinity; was licensed to preach by the Morris Co. Presbytery, N. J. Jan. 1, 1785; itinerated for two years; was ordained pastor of the Presb. Ch. at Cutchogue, Southold, L. I. June 28, 1787; continued there ten years; was installed pastor of the Presb. Ch. at Setauket, Hampstead, L. I. Sept. 27, 1797, remaining such to his death, an entire ministry of 71 years. In July 1800, he visited Hanover, preached at the College church, and at the next commencement received the degree of A. B. out of course. He was a married man.

* JASPER MURDOCK, A. M. the son of Thomas and Elisabeth (Hatch) Murdock, was born at Norwich, Oct. 15, 1759, and died at Bloomingdale, Ohio, Jan. 4, 1803, Æ. 43. He settled as a trader in Norwich; removed to N. Y. city, and then to Ohio, where he was largely and successfully engaged in land speculations. He married, 1. Sarah, dau. of the Hon. Peter Olcott of Norwich, at N. in 1787. 2. Margaret, her sister. 3. The dau. of the Rev. Lyman Potter of Norwich.

* JAMES BARNET PORTER, the son of Dea. Daniel and Sarah (Barnet) Gaylord Porter, was born at Hebron, Ct, in 1765. He sailed from New York city for Natchez, Miss. in 1788, and was never heard from by his relatives, who believed that he was lost on the voyage. Ambrose Porter, D. C. 1784, was his brother.

* LOUIS VINCENT was born at Lorette, near Quebec, E. C. and died there in May 1825, Æ. 65. He was a Lorette Indian, who after graduating returned to his tribe, and was long a very useful teacher among them. While in college, he was the happy instrument of saving, by his alertness and skill, Amy, the child of Dr Laban Gates, who was near perishing at the bottom of a well.

According to Cogswell's Hist. Deerfield, he was son of Nehemiah & Hannah (Philbrick) Cram; b. Nov. 12. 1762.

Ephraim Judson of Taunton, Ms; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Byfield, Dec. 20, 1787, an office held until death, nearly 38 years. He published 18 occasional sermons; 3 orations; a History of New England; a Gazetteer of the Eastern and Western Continents, jointly with the Rev. Dr Jedediah Morse; a system of Modern Geography; a Memoir of Pres. Eleazar Wheelock, jointly with the Rev. Dr David M'Clure; the Sacred Geography or Gazetteer of the Bible; in addition, a posthumous vol. of his sermons was issued in 1826. Dart. conferred his doctorate in 1807. He was considered an able divine and successful preacher. A political sermon of his, highly seasoned with Federalism and opposed to the Democratick party, attracted great attention in its day, and was the subject of much praise and severe censure, precisely as the prepossession of the reader prevailed for the one side or the other of the existing antagonists. He married Mary, dau. of Dea. Joseph Hale of Byfield, Nov. 7, 1796. Ariel Parish, D. C. 1788, was his brother.

dis. 15 July 1835. * HENRY AUGUSTUS ROWLAND, A. M. the son of the Rev. David Sherman, and Mary (Spaulding) Rowland, was born at Providence, R. I. Jan. 13, 1764, and died at Windsor, Ct, Nov. 28, 1835, Æ. 71. He studied divinity with his father; was ordained his colleague pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Windsor, May 5, 1790, a position held, unitedly or alone, ~~through life or~~ 45 years. Several occasional sermons were published by him. He married 1. Elisabeth, dau. of Gen. Newbury at Windsor in Mar. 1795. wid. 11 Aug. 1796 2. Frances, dau. of the Hon. Moses Bliss of Springfield, Ms, Apr. 18, 1800. William Frederick Rowland, D. C. 1784, was his brother. * JOHN SAWYER, A. M. – D. D. the son of Thomas and Hepzibah (Dewey) Sawyer, was born at Hebron, Ct, Oct. 9, 1755, and died at Bangor, Me, Oct. 14, 1858, Æ. 103 years and 5 days. He entered the Rev. army as a volunteer in 1777, and was at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne. On graduating, he studied divinity, first with Pres. John Wheelock, and then with the Rev. Dr Samuel Spring of Newburyport, Ms; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Orford, Oct. 2, 1787; dismissed Dec. 17, 1795; installed at Boothbay, Me, in Oct. 1798; dismissed in 1808; removed to Newcastle, Me, in order to promote the welfare of the Academy there; after staying a year or two, was a home Missionary in Maine, actively engaged in building up churches, encouraging the progress of education, and establishing Sabbath Schools; ultimately took up his residence in Garland, Me, remaining there near 40 years before going to Bangor. His tenacity of life was remarkable, holding out in uncommon health almost to the last. He visited his native town in his hundredth year and preached; attended the General Conference of Me at Bath in June, 1857, and addressed a large audience for nearly an hour, his voice filling the house. Dartmouth conferred the D. D. in 1857 in his hundred and second year, not on account of his extreme age but for his theological attainments. With one exception, he lived to be the oldest of United States graduates. That exception was the Rev. Nathan Birdseye, Yale College, 1736, who died Jan. 28, 1818, Æ. 103 years, 3 months, and 9 days, being his senior by only 3 months and 4 days. His whole ministry continued 71 years. He married Rebecca, dau. of Thomas Hobart of Pembroke, Ms.

* MASE SHEPARD, A. M. the son of Thomas and Content (White) Shepard, was born at Norton, Ms, May 28, 1759, and died of lung fever at Little Compton, R. I. Feb. 14, 1821, Æ. 61. He was the youngest of 13 children; studied divinity with the Rev. Ephraim Judson of Taunton, Ms; preached at Goshen, Ms, declining a call there; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Little Compton, Sept. 19, 1787, and so continued to his death, an active ministry of more than 33 years, attended with marked ability and happy results. To quote the language of another; "He was a distinguished and successful preacher; a man of commanding presence and powerful voice. In his conversation and conduct, he won the affections of all. His chosen theme in preaching was the sovereign mercy of God. In one of several revivals of religion, he received in one year one hundred and twenty persons into his church." He married Deborah, dau. of John Haskins of Boston, Ms, July 6, 1788.

2. SAWYER. Parentage wanted of Rev. John Sawyer, D. D., born Hebron, Conn., Oct. 9, 1755, graduated at Dartmouth in 1785, ordained and settled at Orford, N. H., and later went to Maine. Founder of several Congregational churches in Maine, active in the founding of Bangor Theological Seminary, died at Bangor, Me., Oct. 14, 1858, 103 years old. He was grandson of Edward Sawyer and Elizabeth (Mack) Sawyer of Hebron, Conn., nephew of Jonathan Hutchinson and Hannah (Sawyer) Hutchinson of Hebron and Gilead, Conn., and also nephew of John Sawyer of Hebron, Conn.

borough, Feb. 28, 1833, æ. 72. He studied theology with the Rev. George Leslie of Washington; preached some years at Henniker and also at Wells, Me, but health failing was never ordained; then became a (bookseller) and mail carrier agent at Chester for about 14 years; afterwards lived at Bedford, Sutton, Warner, and Hillsborough, dying in the last town of asthmatick consumption. He married, 1. Polly dau. of Dea. John Dearborn of Chester. 2. Frances Congdon, dau. of Thomas Jones of Claremont.

* Solomon Spalding, A. M. was born at Ashford, East Ashford Society, Ct, in 1761, and died at Amity, Washington Co. Pa, in 1816, æ. 55. In youth, he was a soldier in the Rev. army, and, leaving it, read law with Judge Zephaniah Swift of Windham, Ct, but on change of religious views sought the ministry and entered the sophomore class at Dart. at the age of 21. Graduating there, he studied divinity and became a licentiate of the Windham, Ct, Cong. Association, Oct. 9, 1787; preached 8 or 10 years and, being in this time ordained an evangelist, received several offers to settle that were declined owing to ill health. In 1795, he was married, and soon after went into business with his brother, Josiah, at Cherry Valley, N. Y. but both removed the store to Richfield, N. Y. in 1799. Here they purchased large tracts of land in Pa and Ohio, to superintend which Solomon moved to Salem, Ohio, but the war of 1812 deranged their plans and caused great losses. Josiah, then visiting his brother, found him in poor health and low spirits, writing a work of fiction, suggested by the opening of a mound, in which were discovered human bones and some relicks indicative of a former civilized race. He entitled his work a "Manuscript Found," and in it imagined the fortunes of the extinct people. Josiah left him thus employed. Not long after, probably in 1814, Solomon went to Pittsburgh, Pa, where he was followed by Sidney Rigdon, then a printer and afterwards a noted Mormon. He told his employer of Spalding's novel, who borrowed the manuscript and offered to print it. This was refused, and the author wandered to Amity, the place of his death. His widow returned to New York with the manuscript, and while absent from home, a stranger called on her and desired to examine it, that he might confirm or refute a report current in the West, that it had become the Mormon bible. She permitted him to visit her house and obtain it from a certain chest. He went and reported that he could not find it. Mrs Spalding never saw it after this. The probability is, that Rigdon copied the work at Pittsburgh and that the stranger purloined the original to avoid a future exposure. The uniform testimony of those who read the work is, that the basis and in great part the form thereof now constitute the Mormon bible. And thus a clergyman was most unwittingly and innocently the medium of a delusion, whose dimensions have become so large and its impostures so monstrous. The above facts are chiefly imbodied from a letter written by the brother in question and dated at Eastford, Jan. 6, 1855. Mr Spalding, though married, had no children.

* Calvin Waldo, the son of Shubael and Abigail (Allen) Waldo, was born in Mansfield, Ct, Mar. 12, 1759, and died at Dalton, Ms, Aug. 25, 1815, æ. 56. He read law with the Hon. Judge Theodore Sedgwick at Stockbridge, Ms, and John Chandler Williams at Pittsfield, Ms; began practice and continued through life at Dalton; was highly respected and greatly beloved. He married, 1. Judith, dau. of Moses Graves of Pittsfield. 2. Clarissa (Dwight) Whitney, dau. of —— Dwight of Springfield, Ms, and relict of Josiah Whitney of Westfield, Ms.

Ch. at Meredith, now Laconia, Nov. 28, 1792; dismissed by a Council on charges affecting his moral character, Aug. 28, 1798. He forthwith entered the navy, not as chaplain as stated in the History of Gilmanton, but as ship's steward of the Essex. That ship touched at Batavia in the summer of 1800, and, his former position having been ascertained, he was appointed to deliver an oration on the vessel's deck on the 4th of July, but, seized with fever, death ensued on the 3d as above given. Gilbert Tennent Williams, D. C. 1784, was his brother.

Deism

Religious Thought in Eighteenth Century America

Deism in Eighteenth Century America. By Herbert M. Morais. $3.50. New York: Columbia University Press.

THE two outstanding deistic critics of Christianity in America were Thomas Paine and Elihu Palmer. The latter had been a Baptist minister of Philadelphia, who was forced to give up his pulpit because of his heterodoxy, and proposed to save liberalism by fighting what seemed to him its bitterest opponent, the clergy. From 1793 onward, the Congregational ministers of New England allied themselves with Federalistic conservatism. In 1793, Paine published "The Age of Reason," desiring to put an end to the clergy by destroying belief in Biblical revelation. Paine was not a "filthy little atheist"; far from it. Deism rejected the need of revelation, the authority of the Scriptures and evangelical Christianity, but believed in natural religion, in a First Cause, and usually in a personal God. While deism was active in America from 1713, it did not become militant and destructively active until after the Revolution.

Among the most prominent early deists were Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Samuel Hopkins of Rhode Island, signers of the Declaration of Independence.

John Adams and George Wythe, also signers, were close to the deistic philosophy. Ethan Allen of Ticonderoga fame, was a militant deist and wrote "Reason, the Only Oracle of Man," which the president of Yale said in his diary was "replete with scurrilous Reflexions on revelation," and piously added of its author: "And in hell he lifted up his eyes being in torment." Many other revolutionary leaders were inclined to "liberalism," including George Washington, George Mason and James Madison.

One of the reasons for the decline and defeat of deism in America was the Great Awakening, with its militant and forceful leaders like Jonathan Edwards and George Whitefield. Behind this movement was a determined and well-organized evangelical Christianity. Another reason was the failure of deistically inclined, rich and well born liberals to back up the anti-Christian attack made by Paine and Palmer. This deprived deism of its chief financial and intellectual support. A deistic spirit prevailed in Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, Princeton and other colleges from 1795 to 1800. When Lyman Beecher was a sophomore at Yale, the majority of the entering class were "skeptics," calling one another by the names of Voltaire, Rousseau and D'Alembert. Pulpit and press were aroused. Bible and Tract societies were formed, and magazines were founded to fight the deistic "legions of darkness." While the Unitarian movement had something in common with deism, William Channing and his colleagues believed in revelation and miracles, and it was not until Theodore Parker came, after deism had died out, that the Unitarian preacher substituted "the absolute Religion of Nature" for the former Christianity. By 1805, the year of the death of Elihu Palmer, deism had run its course and the second Great Awakening had made the country safe for Christianity, though the Owenite socialists revived deistic philosophy somewhat between 1825 and 1835.

Besides giving us the history of deism in America Dr. Morais has portrayed its European background concisely and succintly. His treatise adds a valuable strand to the story of Colonial America, laying bare a story of inner life so often overlooked. He has placed under obligation students of philosophy and religion, as well as those interested in American history. Usually he is fair and judicial in his treatment, but occasionally he reads into the thinking of some revolutionary leaders some questionable implications. On the whole, it is a candid, careful, scholarly treatment of a phase and factor of American life which needed just such exposition as he has given.

Col. Josiah Dunham's Venture

The Washingtonian, started July 23, 1810, was a Federal venture as the Federals as well as the Republicans were at odds with Spooner's neutral policy. Thomas M. Pomroy was the printer and the editor was Col. Josiah Dunham, who is one of the outstanding characters in Windsor's history.

The Colonel came to Windsor from Mackinaw Territory of Michigan. He emphasized his writings with a generous use of italics and capitals. The paper was thrown broadcast over the state so that by the end of two months the Colonel declared he had 5,000 subscribers in Vermont. Whereupon the Republican offered him a reward of $500 for a true list of 400 names, but he took no notice of the offer.

He was a great politician and in the exciting contest for the election of governor by the general assembly in 1813, there having been no election by the people, Colonel Dunham acted as clerk and the duty of counting the votes fell upon him. He was a gentlemen of the old style with ruffled shirt front and long, full-ruffled wristbands. The tradition is that in counting the votes his ruffles continually worked down over his hands which made it necessary for him to continually push them back. In so doing a ballot for Governor Galusha, the republican candidate, got entangled in the ruffles, so the federal candidate, Martin Chittenden, was elected receiving 112 votes and Galusha 111. Subsequently 112 members made affidavit that they voted for Galusha but to no avail as Chittenden had been "counted in".

A Rare Washington Oration

Among the many items of Vermont interest catalogued by The Tuttle Company of Rutland, Vt., in their latest Vermont catalogue, is a copy of Josiah Dunham's "Oration in Commemoration of the Birth of Our Illustrious Washington, at Windsor, Feb. 24, 1812, Before the Washington Benevolent Society, Windsor, 1814." The work is merely noted in Gilman's Bibliography of Vermont, and is a pamphlet of forty-eight pages. While the oration is interesting, it is less so than the author, who was also the publisher, and issued "The Washingtonian," a Federalist paper, for several years at Windsor. Mr. Dunham was graduated from Dartmouth in 1789, and was secretary of state for Vermont in 1813-15. In the exciting contest for election of governor, by the General Assembly in 1813, there having been no election by the people, Mr. Dunham acted as clerk, and the duty of counting the votes consequently devolved upon him. He was a gentleman of the old style with ruffled shirt front and long, full-ruffled wrist-bands, and the tradition is that in counting the votes his ruffled wristbands continually worked down over his hands, which made it necessary for him continually to push them back with his fingers, and in so doing a ballot for Governor Galusha, the Republican candidate, is supposed somehow to have got entangled in the ruffles, thus electing the Federal candidate, Martin Chittenden, by one majority, he receiving 112 votes and Galusha 111; subsequently 112 members made affidavit that they voted for Galusha, but it was of no avail as Chittenden had been counted in.

—Mrs. Catherine Benjamin of Cornish Flat, N. H., has presented the Windsor library with a bound volume of "The Washingtonian." This was published in Windsor by Thomas M. Pomeroy and Josiah Dunham. The first number was issued in July, 1810, and the last in July, 1813, when its publication was discontinued. The volume is in a fair state of preservation, and contains all the numbers of the old paper.

An oration in commemoration of the birth of our illustrious Washington, pronounced at Windsor, Feb. 24th. 1812, before the Washington Benevolent Soc., by Josiah Dunham.

Few men have lived more beloved or died more lamented. He was 6 feet 3 inches in height and of a truly noble presence. His publications were, an oration on July 4, 1798; a eulogy on the death of Washington in 1799; and a large pamphlet, taking the side of Pres. John Wheelock in his difficulties at Dartmouth.

It was to him that the Father of his country addressed a letter, the writer has often seen and of which the Col. was justly proud. It was this, "Mount Vernon, 4th August, 1798. Sir, your favor of the 13th ulto. accompanying the oration delivered by you on the anniversary of American Independence, I received by the last post. For both I thank you. The sentiments expressed therein do me much honor. They flatter me highly, and cannot fail to make grateful impression on the sensibility of one who offers you in return his very best wishes, and the assurance of being, Sir, your most obed't and Very Humble servant, Geo. Washington. Mr Josiah Dunham, A. M."

* SERENUS SWIFT, A. M. the son of the Rev. Dr Job and Mary Ann (Sedgwick) Swift, was born at Richmond, Ms, May 27, 1774, and died at

The first Swift of whom we have record was the Rev. Job Swift, pastor of the Congregational church from January, 1783 to 1785. Serenus, the third child and eldest son of Job and Mary Ann Swift, was born in Richmond, Mass., May 27 1774. He graduated at Dartmouth College, studied law and settled in Manchester about 1800, probably a year or so before the beginning of the century. He married Rachel Buckly of Weathersfield, Conn., August 11, 1805. He built the brick part of the house we are considering in 1804, and he had an office on the north of the lot. The date of the building was on the keystone which was over a window above the front door. It was a small piece of white marble with masonic lettering on it. He belonged to the order of Masons. After a few years he lost his money and was obliged to sell the house. Some years later he bought the house next the Anderson house and lived there until 1834 when he exchanged houses with Ephraim Munson and moved to the house on the hill, known for many years as Swift's hill (now the tenant house of Clarence M. Clark) where he spent the remainder of his long life. He died March 30, 1865. He had three sons and one daughter. The second son, Edward Buckley Swift, married Christina Hawkins, October 23, 1838 and died April 20, 1862. They had two sons, Theodore, born December 29, 1839, who married Agnes M. Burton September 13, 1870, and George Hawkins who married Ella A. Burton, November 11, 1873. Theodore and his wife had four children, Maud A., who married M. J. Hawley of California, and died there in ————————; Burton, who died in 1889; Fanny, who died in infancy; and Edward H., who is the last man of the name in Manchester.

Serenus Swift's daughter Juliet, went south as a teacher, and married Judge Ebenezer Ford of Spring Cottage, Miss., May 28, 1846. She came north at the outbreak of the Civil War and educated her three children, at least the two sons, at Burr and Burton Seminary, and then returned to the South where she di[illegible] in 188[illegible]

*1470. Dana. "Rice," Aug. 1, 1910. Captain William Dana of Lebanon, N. H., was born in Ashford, Conn., Aug. 9, 1737. He was son of Jedidiah Dana and Elizabeth, his wife. (Her maiden name not known.) His father, Jedidiah, was born Cambridge, Mass., son of Benjamin Dana and Mary Buckminster, his wife, and grandson of Richard Dana, who settled in Cambridge about 1640, and Ann Bullard, his wife. Jedidiah settled in Pomfret, Conn., afterward moving to Ashford.

William Dana fought in the French War, and on his way back from the second siege of Louisburg (1758) crossed New Hampshire to reach the Connecticut River, and probably then decided to return and settle there. He was one of the grantees of Lebanon, N. H., and was instrumental in getting the charter for the town and spent the winter of 1762-3 there with three other men. Their camp was not far from the mouth of White River. The early settlers came in canoes slowly paddled up the river, on foot, on horseback, in ox-carts and on ox-sleds, toiling through the forest at the rate of five and ten miles a day. "He was the first man to cut a stick of timber and plant a hill of potatoes or corn in the town. He also held the first charter for a ferry across the Connecticut. In addition to other excellences, he was a true Christian. Before any minister was resident in the town, he officiated at funerals." (Lebanon Centennial.) He served during the Revolution as lieutenant and adjutant and wintered with Washington at Valley Forge. He died Dec. 11, 1805, and is buried in the oldest cemetery in West Lebanon. The inscription on his stone was still legible some years ago, and probably still is so, but there is no trace of a stone to his wife. He married, Nov. 27, 1770. (Ashford Records.) His wife, Joanna Sessions, was born in Pomfret, Conn., and was probably sister of Simeon Sessions.

Their children were: William, Jr., born Oct. 28, 1771; Joanna, born Oct. 15, 1773; Simeon, born Nov. 30, 1775; Betsy, born June 6, 1778; Jedediah, born July 15, 1780. A daughter died Feb. 7, 1782, twelve hours old. In addition to these, the Dana genealogy gives Daniel, a physician in Vermont, who died in 1835, Fanny and Sarah. Joanna married Andrew Post of Lebanon, Fanny married a Cochran and lived in Pembroke, N. H.

General James Dana, who distinguished himself as a lieutenant at the Battle of Bunker Hill, was a brother of William Dana. As to Joseph and Jedediah Dana, Joseph was of Pomfret, Conn., uncle of William and died in Lebanon, N. H., 1778. Jedediah Dana, Jr., William's brother, was a grantee of Enfield, N. H. It was either he, or more probably their father, Jedediah, Sr., who was grantee of Lebanon. Rev. E. L. Magoun of Albany, N. Y., was a descendant of William Dana.

If further information about descendants is desired, I shall be glad to give any assistance in my power. B. F.

* PHILIP CARRIGAIN, A. M. the son of Dr Philip and Elisabeth (Clough) Carrigain, was born at Concord, Feb. 20, 1772, and died at the same, Mar. 16, 1842, Æ. 70. He read law with the Hon. Arthur Livermore of Holderness; practised first at Concord, and afterwards at Epsom and Chichester, but finally returned to Concord; was N. H. Sec. of State 4 years, 1805 to 1809 and also Clerk of the Senate. He surveyed a great part of N. H. and published an excellent map of the State. He did not marry.

* WILLIAM LANGDON, the son of Isaac Langdon, was born at Farmington, Ct, Dec. 25, 1768, and died at Simsbury, Ct, in 1817, æ. 48. He was a trader in Rowe, Ms, from 1794 to 1806; then taught two years at Baltimore, Maryland; was next at Slatersville, R. I. a book keeper in Slater's factory; returned to Rowe in 1813, devoting himself to teaching and farming; afterwards engaged in a school at Fort Edward, N. Y. but here, what were premonitions before became confirmed insanity.

In this condition, wandering off in the winter to Litchfield Co. Ct, a melancholy fate befell him. On Feb. 4, 1816, his feet being badly lacerated in walking through snow and ice, he took a horse from a shed and rode him 10 or 12 miles. He was pursued, arrested, and tried in the Sup. Court which began two days after on Feb. 6, 1816. And here, a perfect stranger, without counsel and demented, he was found guilty and sentenced to the State prison for 3 years. In that horrid mine, sixty feet in depth, poor Mr Langdon was rendered frantick and died a maniack. His mental malady was now proved beyond a doubt, and the precipitate action of the Court and jury fully established. As was rightly written by Deacon John Thomas of Williamstown, Ms, who knew the victim well, "I have always considered the sentence passed on Mr Langdon the most cruel and unjust of any sentence passed by any court in this enlightened country, and that no stigma ought to lie upon his character in consequence." Mr Langdon married Sally Redfield some time previous to 1806.

THE REV. HOLLAND WEEKS.

Sixty years ago, the Rev. Thomas H. Merrill and the Hev. Holland Weeks were the two most prominent ministers in Vermont, on the West side of the mountain. If either were more distinguished than the other, it was Mr. Weeks, as is witnessed by the greater frequency with which his services as a preacher were required on special occasions. But while Mr. Merrill's reputation steadily increased, and his memory is still fresh and fragrant in Vermont, the very name of Mr. Weeks has passed into utter forgetfulness in the churches where once he was so well known. It will not be amiss now to put upon record, for the first time, the leading facts in his life. The materials for such a record are sufficiently abundant but quite widely scattered. The principal authorities to which reference has been made in preparing this paper are Week's History of Salisbury, Vt., Robert's History of Arlington, Mass., Chapman's Alumni of Dartmouth College, Emery's Ministry of Taunton, Contributions to the Ecclesiastical History of Connecticut, Vermont Adviser, vols. 2, 4 and 5, American Quarterly Register, vols. 8 and 18, and manuscripts of P. H. W.

Holland Weeks, son of Holland and Hannah (Mosely) Weeks was born in Brookline, Ct., 29 April 1768. Holland Weeks, senior, was the son of Ebenezer, who was the son of Joseph, who was the son of "one of three brothers," who emigrated from England about 1630 and settled near Boston. Hannah Mosely was descended, following the maternal line all the way, from John and Priscilla Alden, the former of whom was the first of the pilgrims who set foot on Plymouth Rock, and the latter of whom has been made famous in story and song by her naive question—"Prythee, John, why do you not speak for yourself?" The subject of this notice, therefore, had what Cotton Mather quaintly calls, "the mercy of a good descen."

At the age of 16 he became a Christian, and felt it his duty to prepare for the ministry, but poverty and the lack of canonical schools hindered him for several years from pursuing the necessary studies. Early in 1789 the family moved to Salisbury, Vt., and, soon after, he commenced preparing for college under direction of the Rev. John Barnet of Middlebury. He entered Dartmouth College in 1791, and was graduated in 1795. Among his classmates who attained to eminence were Samuel Worcester (D. D.) Thomas Snell, (D. D.), John Vose, (the celebrated teacher) David Everett, (author of the popular juvenile poem, "You'd scarce expect one of my age, etc.,") not to mention five or six, who rose to no higher destination than that of being members of Congress. He studied theology with the Rev. Ephraim Judson of Sheffield, Mass., and the Rev. Stephen West, D. D. of Stockbridge, the latter of whom was a Calvinist of the extreme school, and thoroughly indoctrinated him with that type of theology.

He was ordained pastor of the (First) Congregational Church in Waterbury, Conn., 20 November 1799. The Rev. Ephraim Judson preached the sermon. That church, now so strong and the mother of several other churches, was then so weak that it could hardly sustain the institution of the gospel, and for want of sufficient support he was dismissed in December 1806. During most of the year 1807 he labored as a missionary to Northern Vermont and North-Eastern New York. His next settlement was at Pittsford, Vt., where he was installed 30 December 1807. In the following March a powerful revival commenced, which, before it closed, completely changed the moral condition of the town. The remark was frequently made that wherever it was once a disgrace in Pittsford to be thought serious. it was now a disgrace not to be so thought. The conversions were 200 in number, and 133 persons united with the Congregational Church. Early in 1811, another revival, less extensive, took place, and resulted in the addition of 35 persons to the church, nearly all of whom had been baptized in infancy.

In the Summer of 1815 he was dismissed from Pittsford, and he was installed, 9 August 1815, in Arlington, Mass., with a salary of $500. The Rev. Nathanial Emmons, D. D., of Franklin preached the sermon. For several years he had been desirous of reading the works of Swedenborg, and at length finding time and opportunity to do so, he began, 10 October 1818, to study these thoroughly and systematically. The result was that he became a convert to Swedenborgianism. It was not without much distress of soul that he gave up the evangelical faith. He wrote in regard to it—"Every worldly consideration was opposed to my reception of the new dispensation. My salary, my reputation, my friends, my means of supporting my rising family, my everything of this nature I saw was to be made a sacrifice. All the evils which I anticipated came upon me, and some that I did not expect." Without making known formally to his people the change in his views, he began preaching to them the new doctrines he had received; but so careless, or so unchristian were his hearers, that he was not detected till late in 1818, when a stranger who was present discovered the imposition and made it known. It produced a profound sensation not only in his own town and church, but through all the neighboring towns.

The church and society requested him to ask a dismissal, which he declined to do, but consented to submit the whole matter to a council. His classmate, the Rev. Samuel Worcester, D. D. of Salem, was moderator of the council, and the Rev. N. Emmons, D. D., was one of the leading members. After two days of patient investigation, unnecessary, indeed, inasmuch as he finally and fully acknowledged his defection from his original faith, the council declared that his theological opinions were "anti-scriptural and dangerous," and advised that he should be dismissed. He was accordingly dismissed, 27 July 1820. Late in the Fall of 1820, he removed to Henderson, N. Y., and there resided till his death, preaching his new doctrines, without compensation, as long as his health would permit. In 1803, he exchanged a horse for 120 acres of new land in Henderson, not without a presentiment that he was providing a home for his old age. He had saved enough out of his scanty salary to erect suitable buildings on the farm and provide it with stock of all kinds; and the income of the farm, and of the Post Office, to which he was appointed, was requisite to supply all his wants. For some years preceding his death, he was quite infirm, but in comfortable health, and his last sickness was of only a few days duration. He died, 24 July 1843, at the good old age of 75.

He maried, 10 December 1799, Harriet B. Hopkins of Great Barrington, Mass., by whom he had one son and four daughters. She died while he was pastor in Pittsford, and he married, 15 October 1812, Mrs. Delia Graves, widow of the Rev. William Graves of Woodstock, Conn. His experience with her was such as to lead him to the very decided conviction that, in his case, at least, a bishop should be the husband of one wife, and no more. They separated, by mutual consent, in 1821.

Mr. Weeks was a man of warm and kind feelings, clear understanding, and acute perception; prompt in business, urbane in manners, industrious in labor. As a minister he was zealous, critical and accurate in his knowledge of the doctrines which he taught, and bold in declaring what he believed. Theologically, he was, after the most strictest sect of our religion, a Calvinist, until his unhappy apostacy. His rank as a preacher was high, and his services were in constant demand at ordinations and on other special occasions Among the ordinations at which he preached during his pastorate at Pittsford, were those of John Denison, at Jericho, 1 March 1809, Josiah Hopkins at New Haven, 16 June 1806; Justin Parsons at Whiting, 25 January 1810; Jouathan Kitchell of Whitehall, N. Y., March 1810; J. Truair at Cambridge, Vt., 2 March 1810; Ralph Robinson at Fairvale, N. Y., 7 November 1810; Oliver Hulburd at Cornwall, Vt., 6 October, 1813; and Josiah Towne at Hanover, N. H., 22 June 1814. Many of these sermons were published, and the titles of some of them, e. g. "Selfish Preachers build up Zion with Blood," "The Word of the Law a Burden to Sinners," are very suggestive. In 1500 he preached before the General Convention of Vermont on "Election the Foundation of Obedience," the only sermon which the Convention had ever thought worth publishing. Among the ordination sermons which he preached while at Arlington were those of Wm. T. Torrey at Plymouth, 1 January 1818, and David L. Hann at Sandwich, 24 February 1818.

THE SYSTEM OF "PURITANISM"

To the Editor of the Transcript:

My attention has just been called by a friend to a letter in the Transcript of Sept. 15 by Miss Alice Osborne Atwood in which she criticises me severely for my reference to her kinsman, Dr. Enoch Tappan, in an article of mine entitled "The Cradling of a New England Parish" in The Churchman (New York) of Aug. 23. Her letter characterizes my article as an "attack on the memory of a good man," as a "sneer at the Puritanism of the last century," and an "imputation of mean motives, &c." This is such a weighty indictment, made, moreover, without any specification of particulars or circumstances, that I must ask you as a mere act of justice to permit me to give to your readers the substance of my paper, a complete copy of which I herewith enclose.

Chief Justice Nathan Weston of Maine (grandfather of the late Chief Justice of the United States, Melville Weston Fuller), his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Fuller, and his son, Daniel Cony Weston, were devout members of the South Congregational Church of Augusta, Me. A sewing society of young girls from ten to fifteen years of age was accustomed to meet in Judge Weston's house once a fortnight to work for some charity, and at the meeting on April 8, 1840, after the work was done, Mrs. Weston and her daughter, Mrs. Fuller, played on the piano, while Daniel, a young lawyer, accompanied them on the violin, and the children, all girls, danced. It was for this offence that the members of the Chief Justice's family were called to answer before a church tribunal. They had already been warned against such evil practices by a committee of the congregation, whose report, made in February, contained an elaborate argument on the heinous sin of dancing, whether at public assemblies or in private houses, the only exception being made in favor of "the Jewish dance for religious purposes in the open air."

The trial lasted from May 1 until the following October, when all, with the exception of young Daniel Weston, were allowed to withdraw and associate themselves with the newly formed parish of St. Mark's. Daniel was not so tenderly treated. His dismission was regarded as an "excommunication and excision."

After a careful perusal of my article, I find no language that can support Miss Atwood's various charges against me concerning her relative. In no place is there a word impeaching the good faith or sincerity of any of the individuals concerned. The main purpose of my article was to record the curious concatenation of events which resulted from the trial, and my hardest word, perhaps, concerning the participants was a quotation from the published record (1840) entitled, "Scenes in a Vestry," where it is said of one of the two accusers, who had the very appropriate name of Dole, that "he was a man afflicted by ill-health," and of the other, Deacon Tappan, that he was "an elderly gentleman and a bachelor." It is true I do speak of the bigotry and "Pharisaic" (not hypocritical) narrowness of the "Puritanism" of that day. I was dealing with a system, and only incidentally with persons, whose names it might have been better to omit, and whose private character was doubtless such as Miss Atwood describes it. Having many devout Puritan ancestors in my own family, some of them of the best New England type, I can cherish no unkind animus in regard to their idiosyncrasies. Nevertheless, I am sure that many others thus situated will agree with me in the pious utterance of that gifted son of Puritan New England, Nathaniel Hawthorne, when he is reported to have said at a Pilgrim banquet, "Let us thank God for having given us such ancestors, but let us thank him not less fervently for every step which takes us farther from them in the march of ages."

One of the old-time ministers of Pembroke was Rev. Dr. Abraham Burnham, who for forty-three years was pastor of the Congregational church in that town. He was born in Dunbarton, March 8, 1775, and died September 21, 1852. He was the contemporary of other old-time ministers who lived in the Merrimack valley, notably the Rev. Dr. Asa McFarland, the Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Bouton, and the Rev. Asa P. Tenney, who served the churches over which they were pastors respectively twenty-seven, forty-two, and thirty-four years. He was ordained as pastor, March 2, 1807; dismissed November 20, 1850; died September 21, 1852. In the earlier years of his ministry he officiated in two meeting houses in town,—one known as the "North Meeting House," situated at the upper end of Pembroke street, and at the "South Meeting House," the present church,—one half of the time in one, and one-half of the time in the other. Afterwards they united their forces, and during the remainder of his pastorate he officiated in the church which is still standing. It was the custom in his days to have long pastorates, instead of a minister having to pull up stakes every few years and seek pastures new; and it seems as though it would have been just as well if this custom had been continued. During Dr. Burnham's pastorate of forty-three years there was considerable marrying and giving in marriage, for in the history of Pembroke there is a record of 311 marriages performed by him from 1807 to 1851. As Senator Henry E. Burnham was born in Dunbarton, it is probable that he is a relative of this divine. We believe Mrs. Joseph B. Walker of this city is a granddaughter. And among the last of the marriages at which he officiated there is this record: "1850, May 1, Joseph B. Walker to Elizabeth L. Upham, both of Concord."

N. J. in 1855 to promote the establishment of Grace Ch. Orange; arrived next at Lee, Ms, in June 1826, and succeeded in causing the building of St George's Ch. there; retired in 1859, owing to a fall in the dark from a railroad platform in that place of a very injurious nature; has since resided in Newburyport, Ms, enjoying remarkably fine health; has published a vol. of 20 sermons on "The ministry, worship, and doctrines of the Prot. Epis. Church," eight editions of which have gone to press; also a vol. of 27 "Sermons to Presbyterians of all Sects;" and besides the above, 18 other Sermons, making 65 in all; has been since 1858 diligently employed on this Dartmouth work. Transylvania Univ. at Lexington conferred the D. D. in 1824. He married Alice, dau. of Ebenezer Buck of Bucksport, Me, May 19, 1811, who still lives. Died at Newburyport, Mass, Oct. 18, 1872.

MRS. ACHSAH WEBSTER.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 2.—Achsah Pollard, widow of Ezekiel Webster, brother of Daniel Webster, died in this city on Friday. She was born in Dunstable, now Nashua, July 9, 1801. She was married on Aug. 5, 1825, to Mr. Ezekiel Webster of Boscawen. After Mr. Webster's death in Court at Concord in 1829, she remained in Boscawen until 1838, when upon the marriage of Mr. Webster's daughter Mary to Prof. E. D. Sanborn of Dartmouth College, she went with them to Hanover, which was her home for more than 20 years. In 1875 she returned to Concord, to the house of her niece, Mrs. Charles C. Lund, where she has since remained. She was gifted always with rare graces of person and character, which the advancing years only increased and intensified. Her keenness of intellect remained undimmed even in her dying hour.

U. Wilcox taught near Riceboro to about 1815; thereafter resided here engaged in loaning money & other business concerns.

* Ezekiel Webster, A. M. the son of Ebenezer and Abigail (Eastman) Webster, was born at Salisbury, Mar. 11, 1780, and died at Concord, Apr. 10, 1829, æ. 49. He read law with the Hon. Gov. James Sullivan of Boston, Ms, and Parker Noyes, D. C. 1796, at Franklin; began practice at Boscawen and so continued. He was a man of sterling integrity, unimpeachable morals, sound Christian faith, and distinguished ability. His standing as a jurist was commanding, and his bearing at the bar won the respect and confidence of both judge and jury. It was while arguing an important cause, that he suddenly fell to the floor, and was thought to have expired before it was reached. Thus perished a citizen universally esteemed and beloved, an honour to his college, of which he was a Trustee from 1819 to 1829, and an ornament of his State. He married, 1. Alice Bridges of Billerica, Ms, Jan. 13, 1809. 2. Achsa Pollard at Concord, Aug. 2, 1825. Daniel Webster, D. C. 1801, was his brother.

He taught the Acad. at Peacham, Vt, ~~2 years~~ 1804-6; then removed to Riceborough, and failed not to sustain a worthy character. He never married. John Wilcox, D. C. 1816, was his half brother.

* Avery Williams, A. M. the son of the Rev. Henry and Susanna (Stowell) Williams, was born at Guilford, Vt, Jan. 9, 1782, and died at Spartanburgh, N. C. Feb. 4, 1816, æ. 34. He studied divinity partly with the Rev. Dr Henry Kollock of Princeton, N. J. and Prof. of Theology at Nassau Hall; was ordained pastor of the Cong. Ch. at Lexington, Ms, Dec. 30, 1807, and there this most amiable and excellent man continued until his dismission, Sept. 6, 1815, owing to ill health. In hopes of recovery, two journeys were made to the south, and the second proved his distemper to have been mortal. There sleep the relicks of one beloved by all who knew him. He married Clarissa, dau. of George Grennell of Greenfield, Ms, Feb. 25, 1807. His only publication was a century sermon, historical of Lexington.

Y. in 1818, having a consumptive tendency, without avail; visited South Carolina and Georgia in 1819, to spend the winter; returned in June 1820 with no better result; then declined rapidly and the next month exchanged worlds.

In person, Pres. Brown was commanding and dignified, prepossessing in manners and graceful, with a mind of uncommon acuteness and a moral worth in perfect symmetry; forced into the conflict between the College and the State, his conduct was unexceptionable, and for Dart. powerfully effective, the celebrated cause being decided in her favour. His publications were 4 sermons and addresses, and 2 pamphlets in reply to the Rev. Dr Martin Ruter's attack on Calvin and Calvinism. Williams Coll. Ms, and Hamilton Coll. N. Y. both conferred the D. D. in 1819. He married Elisabeth, dau. of the Rev. Tristram Gilman, of North Yarmouth, Feb. 4, 1811, Samuel Gilman Brown, D. C. 1831, was his son.

Ethan Allen Greenwood

Another Worcester County artist of some merit, about whom very little is known, was Ethan Allen Greenwood, a most industrious portraitist who flourished in this part of the country in the early part of the nineteenth century. He was born in Hubbardston, in 1779, and died there in 1856. He was a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1806. As early as 1803 he had painted portraits, by means of which he had paid his way through college. He began the study of drawing and painting in New York with Savage, and later he travelled through the New England States as an itinerant portrait painter for some years, eventually settling in Boston. Late in life he succeeded Savage as owner of the New England Museum, or the Old Boston Museum, above mentioned, and many of the portraits exhibited in the gallery were by Greenwood and Savage. There is an excellent portrait of Isaiah Thomas by Greenwood in the possession of the American Antiquarian Society in Worcester. Not infrequently he signed and dated his portraits.

An Historic House.

The destruction by fire of the house on the Keyes and Dow farm in Haverhill, Oct. 1st, removes one of the historic mansions of the Connecticut valley. Standing upon the edge of a plain which projects into the meadows, it was seen for many miles up and down the river, and with its great barns and attendant out-buildings, was a conspicuous object from the passing trains on both railroads.

It was built probably about 1785, and was a fine example of a style of stately mansion which came into fashion in this part of the country about the close of the Revolutionary war. A few of these old-time, large, square dwellings remain in Newbury, and a greater number in Haverhill.

The farm, that is the meadow, is numbered as 46 and 47 of the river lots in that town, and was bought by General Moses Dow in 1785, who was a graduate of Harvard College in 1769. General Dow was one of the most prominent men of his day in New Hampshire. He came to Haverhill about 1774, and opened a law office, and was from Dec. 25, 1774, to June 13, 1807, register of probate for Grafton County. He was also from 1785 to 1787, a member of the governor's council, and in 1791 president of the senate. From 1808 to nearly the close of his life, he was judge of the Court of Common Pleas for the county. He was also major general of the state militia. In 1784 he was elected United States Senator, but declined to serve, on the ground that he did not feel himself qualified for the responsibilities of the position! Imagine a politician in these days considering himself unequal to the position

When that house was built, the highway from Haverhill Corner to North Haverhill passed directly in front of it, and the Road to Chamberlin's ferry, and later to the first bridge over the river, turned off there and went down to the river, on the north side of the house.

General Dow took a prominent part in the later events of the Revolutionary War, was president of the committee of safety for Grafton County, and many of his letters relating to that period are preserved.

Some years before his death he removed to the Corner, where he owned and occupied the house in which the late Milo Bailey lived, the next north of the brick block. He died March 14, 1814, his wife surviving him nearly thirty years. Moses A. Dow who conducted the Waverly Magazine in Boston and founded Dow Academy at Franconia, N. H., was his grandson.

Moses Johnson of Newbury, married a daughter, and his half-brother, Captain Haynes Johnson, married a grand-daughter of Gen. Dow.

After his death, Mrs. Dow and two daughters, Hannah and Mary, lived in the house at the Corner, and Mr. Joseph Bell, a rising young lawyer and a graduate of Dartmouth College in 1807, came to board with them and remained in the family for several years. Miss Mary Dow became attached to him, and considered herself and was believed by her friends to be under promise of marriage to him. This state of things went on for a long time, until during an absence from home of Mr. Bell, these ladies learned of his engagement to Miss Catherine Olcott of Hanover.

She was a daughter of Hon. Mills Olcott, and sister to the wife of Rufus Choate, the great advocate, both being grand-daughters, of Col. Asa Porter, of North Haverhill.

They were married Sept. 3, 1821.

The mother and sister of the unfortunate young lady were very vigerous and outspoken in their denunciations of Mr. Bell, but it is not believed that Miss Dow herself took any part in these denunciations. "She very soon," says Mr. Livermore, "retired to the place of her father's former residence, [the house just burned] where she spent the rest of her life in absolute seclusion."

By reason of the shortening of the road, the house had been thrown into obscurity behind a dense growth of trees, and to the traveler who with difficulty gained a view of it, seemed the fit abode of gloom and despondency.

She was most unfortunately persuaded by her mother and sister to bring a suit against Mr. Bell for breach of promise, demanding heavy damages.

The wealth and high social position of the parties concerned make the case a most memorable one and some of the most eminent lawyers in New England were on one side or the other.

At the first trial of the case, which was at Haverhill, the jury disagreed, but at the second trial at Plymouth, a verdict was rendered for Mr. Bell.

He soon after bought of Mr. George Woodward the fine old mansion at the south end of the common, at the Corner, where he lived till 1842, and rose to be one of the most eminent lawyers in the state. In that year he removed to Boston, and became a partner with Henry C. Durant. who founded Wellesley College. He died at Saratoga in 1851, in his sixty-third year, in the height of his fame. His portrait may be seen in Pearson Hall at Haverhill.

Miss Dow died Feb. 8, 1840, aged fifty-five years, in the house at the Corner, to which she was taken before her death. She was before the disappointment which embittered her life, a brilliant and accomplished woman.

After that event she shunned the society of those with whom she had before been intimate, and passed her life in sorrow and sadness, nearly twenty years of which was spent in this house.

In 1848, the farm was sold to Daniel Messer, who in 1850 sold it to the Connecticut & Passumpsic Rivers Railroad Co., the latter buying it to escape a lawsuit for trespass in filling up a part of the river by an embankment. The farm was purchased by Freeman and Henry Keyes, who then did business at Newbury under the firm name of F. & H. Keyes. In 1854 the brothers dissolved partnership, Freeman retained the store, and the great farm at Haverhill was taken by Henry in whose family it still remains.

The writer is indebted to the manuscript reminiscences of Hon. Arthur Livermore, and to information by Rev. J. L. Merrill, for many of the above particulars.

ANNA TICKNOR. 1896

Newport, R. I., Oct. 5.—Anna Ticknor, daughter of the late George and Anna Ticknor of Boston, died at her summer home here this morning.

She was about 70, and had never been married.

Her father was the well-known author and Harvard professor, who died in 1871. The body will be taken to Boston tomorrow for burial.

Miss Ticknor was known, not only in Boston, her native city, but in every section of the country, through the Society of Home Study, which she established more than 25 years ago and which proved a complete success. She inherited an intense love of study and books from her father, and the last years of her life were devoted almost entirely to this plan for encouraging young people who were unable to complete their education, to make the most of their opportunities and spare moments. She was also appointed one of a commission to see to the disposition of a fund provided by the State for the establishing of public libraries in cities and towns where there were none.

Her father, George Ticknor, for many years occupied the mansion at the corner of Beacon and Park streets, where he had one of the finest private collections of books in the country, while for rarity and importance of certain features, it was unsurpassed. He was appointed in 1817 to the chair of modern languages and literature at Harvard University, an office which he filled for 15 years, drawing audiences composed not only of students, but of outsiders, who appreciated his ability as a lecturer and critic and the impressiveness of his delivery.

Miss Ticknor was in closest sympathy with her father's love of literature, and was of great assistance to him in his work. Her mother was a daughter of Samuel Eliot, a successful Boston merchant, who left a large fortune. Her only other child was Elizabeth, the wife of William S. Dexter, who died in 1881. Miss Ticknor's city home was at No. 41 Marlboro street. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

*1013. Smith, Ruggles, E. M. S. C., Nov. 22, 1909. I have been looking for several years for the ancestors of Ralph Smith, who was born in Roxbury Oct. 25, 1770, and baptized in the First Church with his six own brothers and sisters. I do not see how there can be more than two generations between his father and the first Smith who landed here. The Ralph Smith whom you are seeking is probably a relative. I send you what I have gathered about him, which I think I copied from the Roxbury records. Ralph Smith and Mary Whittemore married by Rev. Amos Adams Dec. 12, 1771, in Roxbury. Polly, a daughter, born in Dedham, date gone, died in Roxbury, Aug. 1772. Ralph, a son, born in Dedham, Sept. 19, 1775, died in Roxbury, Sept. 20, 1776; Ralph, born July 14, 1777. Mary, wife of Ralph Smith, died, Oct. 8, 1777, in Roxbury. Ralph Smith and Sarah Ruggles, married by Thomas Abbott, Nov. 25, 1779; Sally, born Sept. 11, 1780; Nathaniel Ruggles, born May 3, 1782, died the following September; Betsey, born June 25, 1785; Nathaniel Ruggles, born Oct. 15, 1784; Patty, born May 4, 1786; William, July 7, 1787; Rebecca, Aug. 10, 1790; Charles, Aug. 11, 1793; Sophia, June 9, 1795. Sarah, wife of Ralph Smith, died Dec. 23, 1799. He married for his third wife Mrs. Susannah Howe in Roxbury, Nov. 27, 1804. This is as far as I have followed him, as he is not directly connected with me.

NOTED RAILROAD ENGINEER

Stephen Harriman Long, a graduate of Dartmouth, class of 1809, was an explorer and engineer. As an army lieutenant, he became assistant professor of mathematics at West Point and advanced to the rank of colonel. He was sent by the army to examine the portages of both the Fox and Wisconsin Rivers and also to explore the upper part of the Mississippi. An interesting account of his work appears in the book "Voyage in Six-Oared Skiff to the Falls of St. Anthony."

Long proved himself a very skilful explorer and in 1819 was sent by Sec. Calhoun to command an expedition to the Rockies. Through Long's findings railroads supplanted many of the old Indian trails. Considered an authority on railroading, he was engaged as consulting engineer by the Baltimore and Ohio Company and had charge of all the large surveys of the West. He established a system of curves in locating roads and was responsible for many improvements in bridges, roads and railroads. Long's Peak in the Rockies is a memorial to his life's work. The first railroad manual in the United States was the work of Long.

He married, 1. —— —— in 1834. 2. Maria, dau. of Adonijah Nash, Nov. 26, 1842.

* JOEL WRIGHT, the son of Benjamin and Betsey (Adams) Wright, was Levi Woodbury lived in the period when New Hampshire and Maine were often Democratic. He was called "Rock of New England Democracy." His career is typical of his day and the manner in which men in those times rose to political prominence and high office.

He was born at Francestown, N.H., on December 2, 1789, about the time that Washington's first term as President began. He was the grandson of Peter Woodbury, soldier of the French and Indian War. Levi Woodbury was graduated from Dartmouth in 1809.

He attended the law school at Litchfield, Conn., one of the earliest law schools in the United States, which has long since disappeared. In the earlier days there were no law schools. Students were often admitted to the bar without passing an examination.

It is told of Patrick Henry, one of the most eloquent orators of the United States and one of the most successful lawyers of his day, that after six weeks, during which he spent part of his time in a law office, he applied for admission to the bar, and although unable to answer the most ordinary law questions he was admitted at the request of friends.

He had been a failure as a country storekeeper, and it was felt that he was entitled to try to make a living practicing law if he wanted to.

Levi Woodbury was not the Patrick Henry type of lawyer. He really was learned in the law. After a term on the bench he was elected governor of New Hampshire. After his term as governor he became speaker, and in 1825 was elected United States senator.

President Jackson appointed him secretary of the navy in 1831 and promoted him to be secretary of the treasury in 1834. He served as secretary of the treasury the remainder of Jackson's second term and through all of Van Buren's term, an unusual record in those days when cabinet changes were frequent.

When Van Buren's term expired in March, 1841, Levi Woodbury returned to the Senate, where he sat until 1845, when President Polk appointed him justice of the United States Supreme Court in place of Joseph Story. After six years in the service of the United States Supreme Court he died in 1851. He began holding office as a local judge in 1817 and served practically continuously for thirty-four years, being promoted from one office to another.

Levi Woodbury was typical of the men who made the Democratic party at one time a national instead of a sectional party. He was active in politics before the combination of the anti-slavery and the tariff issues made New England opposed as a unit to Democratic candidates.

He dated back to the period when counties like St. Lawrence in New York, now overshelmingly Republican, were strongly Democratic and furnished Democratic leaders like William L. Marcy and Preston King.

The Wadsworth family in those days were Democrats. Many present day Republican leaders are descended from that old Democratic stock.

FRANK NORTON GREELEY

Rev. Frank Norton Greeley was born at Chicopee Falls, Mass., on May 6, 1850. He was the son of Rev. S. S. N. Greeley, Civil War chaplain and Congregational minister of many years' service in Michigan, New York and New England pastorates. His mother was Sarah Barker Curtis, whose father, Jonathan Curtis, was a well-known Congregational preacher of New England.

Frank N. Greeley was educated at the University of Michigan and Auburn Theological Seminary, and was ordained as a Congregational minister in 1877.

In his nearly 50 years of service in the Congregational ministry, Mr. Greeley filled a number of pastorates in New York and New England churches. Although handicapped by ill health, he was never satisfied without some active form of his chosen work in church supply, Bible school, conducting prayer meetings, or contributing to the religious journals, including frequent messages in The Congregationalist. In 1890, Mr. Greeley voyaged to California around Cape Horn, and filled out his ranch life by continuing church supply and other work of the ministry to the extent his strength permitted. In later years he returned to the eastern states, living in Florida and Washington, D. C. His last regular pastorate was at Vanderwerken, Va., a suburb of the National Capital.

—Miss Florence H. Sturtevant, is, as before stated in this paper, a teacher in Madison institute, Richmond, Ky. In a letter of recent date to the Hartland whist club, she says: "One evening I called on Mrs. Burnham, a wealthy old lady living in an old brick mansion set back from the street behind great spreading pines, some distance. As we sat talking by a great, open fire, her husband, Maj. Burnham came in and bowing in a stately way as he was introduced, and talked with us. He asked me where my home was and when I said it was in Vermont, he said, 'then you are a republican, of course.' As we were talking he said, 'there was a Daniel Breck, grandfather of Judge Breck here in town, who came from Hartland, Vermont.' Imagine my surand his own, when I told him that was my home. Mr. Burnham further said that Daniel Breck, the son of the one from Hartland, graduated from Yale college in 1812. He was also a minister. Maj. Burnham himself was valedictorian at Yale in 1840." The Daniel Breck, so well known here as the first settled minister in Hartland, had a son Daniel who went south and settled there. The Judge Breck, discovered in Richmond by Miss Sturtevant is a great grandson of Daniel Breck, the first settled minister in town more than a century ago. Th

DEATH OF REV. JOSEPH TRACY, D. D.—It is with unfeigned sadness that we announce the somewhat sudden death of Rev. Dr. Tracy, at his late residence, in Beverly, on Tuesday, A. M., the 24th inst. He had been seriously ill but a few days. His age was about eighty. He was a native of Vermont; graduated at Dartmouth College in 1814, in the class with Thaddeus Stevens, Dr. Jesse Smith, Prof. Nutting and several other distinguished men; and then, we believe, studied theology with the famous Dr. Burton, of Thetford, Vt.; and for some years was pastor of the Congregational Church, at Post Mills Village, in Thetford. From this obscure parish Mr. Tracy went to Windsor and edited the Vermont Chronicle, one of the very ablest religious newspapers ever published in this country. He was afterwards connected with the Boston Recorder, the New York Observer, and Journal of Commerce, if we mistake not.

For very many years Dr. Tracy has been the New England Secretary of the American Colonization Society, and has had his office in Boston.

He has written or edited several valuable works, beside all that he has done in periodical literature. Among the chief of these publications may be named "The Great Awakening," "History of the American Board," and "Memorial of the American Colonization Society." For many years he has been a frequent contributor to the columns of the Traveller, his last communication, describing a Woman's Temperance Movement of the last generation, having been published only two days ago. When leaving it he promised to follow it with other reminiscences of a similar character, but his ever-busy right hand is so soon at rest.

Dr. Tracy was one of the clearest thinkers of his day; and was master of a style that was as remarkable for its simplicity and clearness, as for its sharpness and crispness. As a controversialist he had few equals—no superior in this country. His memory was almost faultless, and his knowledge most extensive and accurate; while his judgment and perceptive powers were extraordinary. He knew more, and knew it more certainly, and understood how to use it better than almost any man of our acquaintance. Yet withal, he was as unpretending and simple in all his ways as a modest boy; and what is most pleasant to say, he retained all the vigor of his mind unimpaired to the very last, dying in his full intellectual strength. But over and above all, he was a good man, sound in the faith, and humble in Christian life; and his death will be counted by all who knew him as a great loss to the church and the world.

Mr. Tracy leaves a widow and two daughters. His widow was Miss Prince, of an old Beverly family, and he has made Beverly his home for a quarter of a century or so.

MRS. SARAH PRINCE TRACY. 1891

Mrs. Tracy died in Beverly, Feb. 7. She was the widow of Rev. Dr. Joseph Tracy, who was the editor of the Boston Recorder from 1834 to 1837. She was born in the "old Prince house" in that town, July 23, 1803. In this same house her sister, the mother of Rev. Charles Carroll Everett, dean of the Harvard Divinity School, organized the first Sunday school in New England. The remains of her grandfather, Rev. Joseph Prince, lie beside those of Whitefield in Newburyport. Mrs. Tracy was widely known among ministers of the last generation, and her hospitable home was the place of many notable gatherings of divines, philanthropists and literary men. Intellectually, she was rarely gifted and cultured, a ready writer and a most interesting conversationalist. In the highest sense of the words, she was charitable and unselfish, and her presence was a benediction whose memory will never fade to those who were privileged to come within its influence.

Joseph Estabrook, A.M., graduate of Dartmouth College and of Princeton Theological Seminary. He came to Knoxville in 1828 as principal of Knoxville Female Academy, "in the management of which he was so successful that the trustees of East Tennessee College looked upon him as a fit man to take charge of its affairs. He was elected president in 1834. His wisdom and energy soon placed the institutions upon a better footing than it had ever enjoyed. He brought scholarly men into the faculty, revised the course of study, and so broadened the scope and policy of the College that during his administration its legal title was changed from East Tennessee College to East Tennessee University. In 1850 Mr. Estabrook resigned the presidency to devote himself to the manufacture of salt in Anderson County, a work which did not prove remunerative. He died May 18, 1855.

According to Rev. F. B. Meyer, the Keswick school of religious thought is pre-eminently a subjective type of religion, emphasizing the work of God in the human spirit. It is an interesting fact showing how the thought of a teacher of one generation may be forgotten by the many, but re-discovered and re-appropriated by the choice few, that Mr. Meyer attributes his initial interest in the Keswick movement to the reading and assimilating of Thomas Upham's book, The Hidden Life: the Principles of the Interior Life. Now Thomas Upham, though comparatively unknown to this generation of Congregationalists, was in his time one of the most notable expounders of our polity. A graduate of Dartmouth, professor at Dartmouth and Bowdoin, and a voluminous author, his name and works were known throughout the nation and in England, where many of his books found London imprints. Mr. Meyer is not the only one who owes Professor Upham much. The late Rev. Dr. Charles F. De-ms of the Church of the Strangers, New York city, was wont to say that all that he ever attained in the world was due to Professor Upham.

graduating in 1823; was ordained an evangelist at Wethersfield, Ct, in 1823; went to S. C. that year, and had charge of a Presb. ALBERT W. BOYDEN

Albert W. Boyden died at his home in Sheffield, Ill., upon Jan. 28, 1916. Mr. Boyden was born in Beverly, Mass., May 24, 1833, a son of Dr. Wyatt C. and Elizabeth (Woodbury) Boyden. He moved to Illinois in 1853, was married to Ellen R. Webb in 1856, and has resided in Sheffield since 1858. For more than fifty years he has been prominently and successfully identified with banking, merchandizing, grain and lumber businesses in western Illinois.

In 1866 he joined the Congregational church at Sheffield. His devotion and loyalty to that church was an influence of the first importance in his life and a contribution of the highest value to the church and community.

From March, 1867, until his death he served his church as a deacon, and for many years was a teacher and superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mr. Boyden was a generous contributor not only to his own church but to all the activities of his denomination. He was a corporate member of the Illinois Home Missionary Society and often a delegate to the District and State Associations and the National Council.

In his death the Congregational Church loses one of its prominent laymen in Illinois. He was respected by all who knew him for his business ability, excellent judgment, conscientious generosity, and earnest, strong Christian character.

He is survived by five children: Mrs. John H. Finley of Albany, wife of the Commissioner of Education of New York; George W. Boyden and Charles W. Boyden, bankers of Sheffield; William C. Boyden, a lawyer, of Chicago, and Albert A. Boyden, managing editor of the American Magazine, of New York.

He was buried from his residence on Sunday, Jan. 30, his pastor, Rev. Franklin Parsons, officiating.

Stowe, O. 1834-5.

* RUFUS CHOATE, A. M.–LL. D. the son of David and Miriam (Foster) Choate, was born in that part of Ipswich which is now Essex, Ms, Oct. 1, 1799, and died at Halifax, Nova Scotia, July 13, 1859, Æ. 59. He was tutor at Dart. from 1819 to 1820; read law at Harv. Univ. law school; with David Cummings, D. C. 1806, at Salem, Ms, and U. S. Atty General William Wirt; began practice at Salem in 1823; removed to Danvers, Ms, in 1824; represented it in the Mass. Leg. in 1825, and Essex Co. in the Mass. Senate in 1827; removed to Salem in 1829; was in the U. S. House of Representatives from 1832 to 1834; settled in practice at Boston, Ms, in 1834, and there remained; served as a Senator in Cong. from 1841 to 1845; was made Atty General of Mass. in 1853 for 1 y. and the same year a member of the State Constitutional Convention. Mr Choate was unquestionably a man of splendid talents, and one to whom the epithet, brilliant, applies with peculiar felicity. He was brilliant as a scholar, brilliant as a jurist, brilliant as an advocate, brilliant as an orator, and brilliant as a statesman. And to this shining record, it must be added that he possessed the sterling qualities of a gentleman, not merely polished manners, but warm affections, benevolent sympathies, incorruptible integrity, and untarnished purity of character. Dartmouth, in the long list of her worthies, justly ranks him next to the immortal Webster, and will never cease to cherish his memory with profound admiration. Among his numerous published addresses, will be found, A speech on the Tariff; another on the Oregon question, a third on the Annexation of Texas; an Eulogy on Harrison; one on Webster, delivered at Dart. College in 1853, and an Address at Danvers, Ms, at the dedication of the Peabody Institute. Yale conferred the Hon. degree in 1844, Dart. and Harv. in 1845, and Amherst in 1848. MRS. CATHARINE S. HOPKINS,

Eldest of the four daughters of Rev. Aaron Foster of East Charlemont, after protracted and distressing illness, entered into her rest, from her home in Geneva, N. Y., on the 13th of July. 1890

She was born at Fort Covington, N. Y., where her father was then pastor, in 1834. Her early life, however, was mainly passed in Charlemont, where she was from childhood an active member of the church, leading an entire class of young men to Christ and His Church as their Sabbath-school teacher.

In 1855 she married Mr. S. W. Hopkins of Northampton, and in 1871 removed to Geneva. Here she has been greatly useful, and beloved of all. Class after class in the Sabbath school of the North Presbyterian Church has been trained by her, not only into Christian knowledge, but into Christian life, and missionary and practical work for the kingdom of Christ. Her interest has not been confined to the merely religious side of life. She was a leader and organizer in literary and art circles for reading, study and mutual improvement. Simple religious services were held on Tuesday, at five o'clock, at Geneva, and the interment took place on Wednesday at the family burial place in Mt. Auburn.

Vt. Chron. June 2. 1877

REV. SAMUEL DELANO.

Rev. Samuel Delano, died in Williamstown, May 24th, aged eighty-two years. Our reverend brother was born in Langdon, N. H., May 20th, 1794. His parents, Barnabas and Ruth Todd Delano, were natives of Tolland, Conn. Married February 16th, 1792, they came first to Langdon, N. H., and afterwards to Williamstown, Vt. Here they settled permanently. Here they made a profession of their faith in Jesus Christ, and gave their children to God in baptism. Samuel, who was the oldest, remembered when he was thus consecrated. His early life was spent on the farm, where he assisted in leveling the forest and doing other pioneer work. When he had grown to manhood, he felt an irrepressible longing for an education; and while sitting under a tree which is still standing near his father's house, he "resolved to go to college." Accordingly he sought a preparation, and graduated with honor at Dartmouth in 1823. During his college course he became a Christian; and, though he had previously chosen the law as a profession, he resolved now to give his life to the ministry. January 7, 1827, he was joined in marriage to Miss Nancy A. Murdock, of Norwich. Their children were one son and four daughters. His work in the ministry was given to the churches in Hartland and Strafford, Vt., and Haverhill and North Haverhill, N. H. In 1834 he was constituted one of the trustees of Dartmouth College. This office he held more than thirty years, and was held by some nearest to the college, as among her most judicious and able guardians. Mr. Delano was a thoughtful, studious man, earnestly devoted to his professional work, careful in the preparations of his sermons, and fond of presenting the glorious gospel message. This he did often in a manner most attractive and with a power peculiarly his own. In December last, while he was visiting a friend in Ohio, his wife died in Amherst, Mass. Soon after receiving that painful intelligence, his own mental and physical strength began rapidly to fail. As soon as it was fully evident that his end was near, he was brought to Williamstown that he might enjoy the loving care of his only sister. Here he remained only a few days, when on the 24th of May, 1877, he was freed from the infirmities of old age, and transferred to that country where faith is lost in sight. On the Saturday following, a few of his early friends, and the neighbors gathered at the house where he died. Here a sermon was preached, and a few words were spoken; the last prayer of our Lord with his disciples was read; appropriate hymns were sang, and then his remains were laid—agreeably to his frequently expressed desire—by the side of the dust of his beloved parents.

George W. Haven (Admitted Federal Fire Society, Portsmouth, N. H., 1846), son of John Haven (F. F. S. 1789). Graduated at Dartmouth College 1838 [1828—see above. J. F.] He afterwards studied in Germany, where he met the famous poet Goethe, to whom he had letters of introduction, and other German literary men. His knowledge of German and Italian literature was extensive. He was also well read in the science of political economy. He was for forty years a Director of the Rockingham Bank. He delivered lectures in Portsmouth on Dante, on political economy, and on banking. Mr. Haven resided in the house on Islington street, erected by his father in 1799, which was demolished (a hundred years after its erection) to make room for the new High School Building, which now occupies its site. He died there August 9, 1895, aged eighty-seven years.

ANDOVER'S JOHNSON HALL

New Dormitory to Be Named After Former Principal of the Academy

Andover, April 19 (Special)—The new dormitory now being erected at Phillips Academy has, by vote of the board of trustees, been named Johnson Hall, in memory of Osgood Johnson, fourth principal of the school. Osgood Johnson was elected principal in 1853, when he was a young man barely thirty. He held the office for four years, during a period of marked prosperity and improvement in school affairs, but was finally obliged to resign his position because of ill health, and died within a very short time. He was one of the most brilliant principals in the history of the school. Each principal of the school, except two, is now honored by having his name attached to some building on Andover Hill.

Today in History and Biography of Hoosier State

One hundred and eight years ago today was the birthday of Caleb Mills, first president of Wabash College, and the man who is frequently called the father of the present public school system of the state. Professor Mills was born at Dunbarton, N. H. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1828 and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1832. In that year he was called to Indiana to open Wabash College at Crawfordsville. The institution was opened under his direction on Dec. 3, 1833, with just 12 young men as students. For 46 years, or until his death, Professor Mills was connected with the college. During that time he constantly suggested improvements in the public school system of the state. His letters to the state Legislature in the forties regarding Indiana's educational facilities, made a strong impression at the time. They showed tremendous work at gathering data and deep thought and pointed to the manner in which Indiana could pull up its citizens from their mire of ignorance. Professor Mills died on Oct. 17, 1879.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Hamilton Smith Stricken Down While Boating.

1903

Durham, N. H., July 4.—Hamilton Smith, a well-known New York mine operator, and senior member of the firm of Smith & Perkins of New York, died suddenly here today while boating. Death was due to heart failure, caused by overexertion.

Mr. Smith, at about 9 a. m., in company with his half-sister, Mrs. Henry Janin, left the Smith residence for a sail down the river, Mr. Smith being an expert boatman. Some difficulty was experienced with the sail and after they had been out about two hours Mr. Smith ran the boat aground to adjust the canvas.

The work took but a few minutes, and the tide was going out, so that when Mr. Smith desired to push the boat into deep water he was unable to do so. He put forth unusual effort to force the boat off bottom, and as he did so Mrs. Janin saw him fall, apparently lifeless, into the water. The woman immediately leaped over the side of the boat and dragged Mr. Smith's body ashore.

Aid was called immediately, but when doctors reached the scene they declared that death had come instantly as the result of heart failure. The body was taken to Red Tower, the Smith residence, at noon.

Mr. Smith, the son of Hamilton Smith, was a native of Louisville, Ky., and would have been 60 yrs. old tomorrow. He came to Durham to reside with his aunt, Miss Mary Smith, when he was only five years old, and he remained until he was 14. Subsequently he began his business career.

As a mine operator he was identified with some of the largest deals in mining properties in the United States, particularly in the gold and copper mines.

Mr. Smith was the author of a text book on mining engineering and he was recognized the world over as an authority on the subject. Much of his work was directed from London, where he spent many of the active years of his life.

He leaves a widow, one own sister, Mrs. Hennen of Indiana, two half brothers, Huntington Smith of St. Louis, and Balard Smith, formerly of the London Times, and a half sister, Mrs. Janin of Durham, who was with Mr. Smith at the time of his death.

His wife was to leave New York this morning and is expected here tonight.

Mr. Smith established the Valentine Smith scholarship at the New Hampshire Agricultural College and was a liberal giver for all public purposes. He had planned to build a public library for the town next year.

Mr. Smith was consulting engineer for the Rothschilds of London for many years, managing some of the world's greatest deals in mining properties. He was a well-known figure in South Africa, Alaska and South America.

For 14 yrs. the eyes of the mining world were turned toward his office in London.

In this country he was the associate of such men as Jennings, Eckerstein Warner, Pyne & Co., D. O. Mills, and many others ...ally prominent. It is said he was the ...d's greatest mining ex...

ALICE HAMILTON SMITH 1906

Mrs. Smith died in Washington, D. C., March 15. She was the widow of the late Hamilton Smith, a mining expert of international reputation. Though residing for a part of each winter in Washington, Mrs. Smith spent the major portion of the year in Durham, N. H., to the rare beauty of whose woods and river and to the service of whose people she was passionately devoted. A Louisianian by birth and education, her home was always radiant with the delightful atmosphere of Southern hospitality. In her life the marks of the Christian gentlewoman were easily detected—simplicity of taste, a great care for the companionship of nature and books, a fine artistic sense, a most delicate intuitive power for detecting the need of sympathy and great capacity for its bestowal. Craving friendship, she was herself a true friend. Keenly interested in the problems of religion and applied Christianity, loyal to Jesus Christ as the declaration of God and humanity, she loved her fellowmen. The call of no local charity was unheeded. The larger interests of the outside world were not forgotten.

Shortly before his death Mr. Smith made generous benefactions to the town and to the state college here situated. Mrs. Smith's thought was to continue the work her husband had commenced. She had recently authorized the announcement of a gift of $10,000 to the college to provide a girls' dormitory. With the gift she always gave herself, mind and heart, to whatever cause the benevolence might aid.

Mrs. Smith was profoundly interested in the life and work of the church. She loved its services. Worship was a delight to her soul. Her offerings for the maintenance of the church were most generous, and substantial memorials of her affection are on every hand.

Hers was the life which death only unfetters and beautifies and glorifies. Her thought of future days was always that of Tennyson's lines:

For tho' from out this bourne of time and place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face,
When I have crossed the bar.

A Remarkable Experience

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article, "by J. D. Bartley, Bridgeport, Ct.," is reprinted from "The Congregationalist" of Feb. 2, 1888. It is the story to which reference was made in "The Congregationalist's" Bible Class last week. It was called to our attention some time ago by Rev. William T. Bartley of Canaan, N. Y., a son of its author.]

THE following strange narrative is authentic. The writer, for the past six years, has had a personal acquaintance with the subject of the experience here related, and the story is based on the account carefully prepared by himself, many years ago.

Rev. Edward B. Emerson, born in Salem, Mass., in 1812, and lately deceased in Stratford, Ct., in his early ministry passed through an experience both wonderful and rare. Graduating from Dartmouth College, he began his ministerial work in 1835. At Norwich, Vt., he was eminently successful, nearly the entire community being converted and brought into the church.

The state of his health forbidding his entering the foreign missionary work, he went, at the age of twenty-seven, as a home missionary, to Brownstown, Mich. Engaged in active revival work, during one of his Sabbath morning sermons he was suddenly attacked with a fever, which generally proved fatal, many victims of which he had followed to the grave. He was at once taken to his boarding place, a physician was called, and a nurse of skill and experience employed. During the first five days of his illness he was twice considered beyond recovery, but, surviving these attacks, he was regarded out of danger, and the nurse returned to her home, and one less skilled was secured in her place. But in a few days violent symptoms returned, and soon, to all appearances, he died.

The physician declared him dead, and the day of the funeral was appointed. At night, according to custom, two young men came as watchers of the dead body. For a day and a half he lay, apparently, in death. His eyes were fixed, his teeth locked, his mouth closed, and no breathing was perceptible. But during this time, as it proved afterwards, his hearing was especially acute, and his mental powers in liveliest exercise. He heard the conversation of his watchers in the next room—also much of the talk of the family and friends in the preparations for the funeral. In this condition, his spiritual experiences were wonderful; the presence of the Savior was manifested. The thought of dying away from home and relatives was at first painful, but this was soon removed by the comforting and reassuring Presence. All his past life, even to minute particulars, was recalled, and the assurance that he was finally to be with Christ was revealed to him more clearly than any spoken word could convey it. Quoting Mr. Emerson's words: "The Divine Comforter never left me for a moment, and on this, my last night, as I then expected, he presented me with a vivid and full view of his agency in all the events of my past life. . . . In addition to this, heaven was partially opened, with its wonderful holiness and glory, and an all-pervading and elevating impression within and around me of supernatural sanctity, splendor, and love, thrilling my soul with mingled reverence and delight. The object, prominent above all others, was a spiritual impersonation of the Lord Jesus. This spiritual representation and communion was enjoyed between one and two o'clock, and I was hearing the conversation of the two watchers at the same time."

At the close of what Mr. Emerson called "this blessed interview," he was sure that he would not die, but that he should be restored, in some way, through his former nurse. In the morning friends called to see the family, and some to see the body. The arrangements for the funeral were freely talked over. Unable to see, unable to give a single sign of life, by word, look, or movement, he was actively interested in the remarks of his visitors. Soon came a knock at the door, which he felt sure was that of his old nurse, come to resuscitate him. He was right. She had walked from her house, two miles away, through deep mud, to make this early-morning call. Mr. Emerson heard her inquiries of his condition, and her remark, "I don't believe he is dead, and we'll try to revive him." She persisted in this till those present were induced to apply various stimulants to different parts of the body, with vigorous rubbing. These operations were continued after many said it was of no use. After a half-hour of this treatment, his eyes began to show signs of life; he began to speak, first in whispers, then with more audible voice. The nurse was praised for her efforts, the funeral preparations brought to an end, and in due time his recovery was complete.

A strange part of this narration of facts remains to be told. How happened the nurse to come at the opportune time, and prove the occasion of the escape from burial alive? She had received no ordinary information of his condition. Her own account was that she was aroused by a very vivid dream that someone was in danger, and that she alone could help him. So impressed was she that she awakened her daughter to consult whether anything ought to be done.

For some reason, the result reached was that in the morning she would visit her former patient and inquire of his condition. On her arrival she was astonished to hear of his death, as she had had no reason to question his final recovery. Her dream came to mind, and led her to doubt the reality of his death, and to insist upon the use of the means for his restoration. Quoting again Mr. Emerson's words: "On inquiry, I ascertained that she was first startled from her slumbers at the same time that I was pervaded, with the assurance that the Holy Spirit would employ her as his agent in recovering me. Under her assiduous care, I gradually regained strength and health, and, returning east, soon resumed my ministry."

After this experience, Rev. Mr. Emerson lived for forty-nine years an eminently useful and busy life, both in the ministry and, in his later years, in the charge of a boys' boarding school in Stratford.

He died in that beautiful town on Jan. 17, 1888, at the good old age of seventy-six years, and was buried in the village cemetery. A widow and five children survive him, one of the latter, Rev. Samuel F. Emerson, being a professor in the University of Vermont.

(9382.) A lady, now in Michigan, has two keepsakes of her father's college course at Dartmouth. One is the usual metallic token of the Phi Beta Kappa, 1776—the year of its foundation. The other is not so easily explained. It is evidently the sign—also in metal—of some "Greek letter society," having the Greek letters Mu, Epsilon, Phi, with the symbol of a heart between, and below the date, 1783. On the reverse is a device something like the capital A, and beneath the initials of the student, J. D., standing for Joseph Dow, class of 1833 at Dartmouth, afterward a well-known teacher, and the local historian of Hampton, N. H., who died in 1889. Does the second token represent any college society, now extinct? C. C. C.

MRS. W. S. COGGIN 1906

Died in Boxford, Aug. 11, Mrs. Mary Clark Coggin, wife of Rev. William S. Coggin and aunt of Dr. Francis E. Clark.

In 1840 Mrs. Coggin came as a bride to the little parish of Boxford, and for more than sixty years was loved and honored and reverenced by every one who ever came into her sunny presence. She was born of good New England stock, educated in the best New England schools, and she always referred with gratitude to the fact that she "had the great privilege of being at Mt. Holyoke under Miss Lyon's training." Except for a year spent in teaching in Ohio, she lived her long life of ninety-four years in one section of New England, yet she never seemed provincial for her interests were world-wide.

Her reading was varied and systematic, her love of astronomy a passion, and throughout her busy life she often rose in the small hours to study the heavens. Her one and only extravagance was benevolence. She denied herself rigidly that she might give lavishly, and her fertile brain and skillful hands made her able to achieve miracles in stretching the slender salary of a country minister. In her exquisitely kept home plain living and high thinking, dignity and simplicity, economy and boundless hospitality, stately manners and profound sympathy were found in rare combination.

She was a natural leader, a born peacemaker, a woman of rare tact and most gracious presence; yet so unassuming, so modest, so free from all self seeking, so eager to disclaim superiority that we did not think of her as the "prominent worker," but (as she always thought of herself) as "The Minister's Wife." But we added "The Model," for such she was. For forty years she taught in the Sunday school and today, in every part of our great country, her "boys," as she loved to call them, gratefully acknowledge the power of Mrs. Coggin's influence, and owe their indebtedness to her.

Her religious life was marked by the deepest reverence and humility, and in her extreme age, when memory failed and friends were dimly recognized, her face would light with the beautiful animation that had always characterized it at the mention of her Saviour. Into that Saviour's presence it was her greatest longing to go, and from the shadows of the earthly life she was gently taken to the light of the life eternal.

WIDOW OF A GOVERNOR

June 25, 1915

Mrs. Susan A. Currier of Manchester, N. H., Was a Liberal Patron of Art

Mrs. Susan A. Currier, widow of Former Governor Moody Currier of New Hampshire, died Friday afternoon at her home in Manchester, aged eighty-seven years. Mrs. Currier was a daughter of Enoch and Penelope (Wellington) Slade, and was born in Brookfield, Vt., Aug. 19, 1828. At Thetford Academy she ranked as one of the most brilliant pupils. Following her graduation, she came to Boston to study. In 1869 she married Moody Currier of Manchester, then a banker, who was governor of New Hampshire in 1885-6. Mrs. Currier was possessed of a large fortune, and was generous in the distribution of it. She was a liberal patron of art. It is expected that her mansion in Manchester will be converted into a public art museum, in accordance with the wish of the late governor.

REV. ELLIOT C. COGSWELL.

Founder and prime mover in the early years of Coe's Northwood academy. He served as headmaster for more than 15 years and was long a prominent figure in the town's religious and educational life.

as 1844, no progress toward higher secondary education was made here until 1865 when Rev. Elliot C. Coggswell resigned his pastorate at New Boston to come to the Congregational church at Northwood. Rev. Mr. Coggswell who, judging by town records, combined the ability to get things done with his ability to formulate plans, addressed the townspeople in Mead hall that same fall on the need for an academy.

A High School association was formed which later changed its name to the Northwood Academy association. Shares to the number of 200 at a value of $10 each were issued to raise funds and work was started on a schoolhouse immediately.

With Rev. Mr. Coggswell, a graduate of Dartmouth college, as headmaster, and Miss Lizzie K. Peabody from the Oxford Femal seminary, Ohio; Miss Mary Meville from Ipswich academy, and Maj. Charles W. Greene, from the Quaker City Commercial college, Philadelphia, as the faculty, the school opened in 1866.

According to the town history (also written by the tireless Rev. Mr. Coggswell), the "modest structure, 50 feet long by 33 feet wide, having a main hall and two anterooms," stood in the plot of ground beside the present site of the Congregational church. It was capped by a "bell, full of sweet melody," which, incidentally, still summons pupils to the building.

In the following spring the building was officially incorporated as an academy under the laws of the state.

The school was to find its first chief benefactor in Eben S. Coe, a native of the town, who became a wealthy Maine lumberman. Although the future benefactor did not have a Northwood academy to attend he must have learned considerable about similar institutions in New England for during his youthful years he attended, successively, Gilmanton academy, Pinkerton academy, where he studied under Peter Folsom "whom he found to be an efficient teacher, but liberal in the use of the rod;" an institution in Manchester, Vt., an engineering academy in Andover, Mass., and finally an institution in Hartford, Conn.

He was active in clearing the Mt. Washington carriage road and carried on a successful lumber business around Bangor, Me., until his death in 1899.

Change Name of Academy.

In 1875 the trustees of the school, out of respect to the memory of Ebenezer Coe (father of E. S.), who had been active in the institution's early progress, changed the name of the academy to Coe's Northwood.

In 1879, when the academy outgrew its small quarters, E. S. Coe donated the funds that enabled the trustees to convert it into a three-story structure somewhat similar to the one now standing by the lake.

Eight years later, in 1887, Mr. Coe purchased the pleasant site now occupied by the academy and gave it to the school. That summer the work of moving the building from its position nearly a half-mile up the street went forward under the direction of Rev. Mr. Coggswell who had retired from the headmastership in 1882 because of ill health. But the strain of the work was too great for Northwood's tireless worker and he died a few days later.

MARTHA VOSE HAZEN.

Mrs. Martha Vose Hazen was born in Atkinson, N.H., Oct. 21, 1815, and died in that place, Sept. 2. She was the widow of Rev. Norman Hazen, who died at Royalston, Mass., in 1852, while pastor of the church there. She was the daughter of John and Lydia Vose, the first named having been one of the first principals of Atkinson Academy. She leaves behind to deeply mourn her loss one sister and a son. Mrs. Hazen was a devout Christian, a devoted mother, and a noble woman. Education, the various missionary fields, temperance and the advancement of the gospel at home always found in her a firm friend and earnest advocate. One Sabbath she attended church on earth, and the next, while others were wending their way there, she joined the happy throng around the throne. She could well say as she passed beyond, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day."

DEATH OF SUSAN L. OLIVER

Widow of Dr. Fitch E. Oliver, Daughter of Episcopal Clergyman, and Long Resident in Brimmer Street May 3/26

Susan Lawrence Oliver, widow of Dr. Fitch Edward Oliver, a prominent physician of his time, who died in 1892, passed away Monday afternoon at her home, 27 Brimmer street after a few days' illness of pneumonia. Born in Salem, Mrs. Oliver was in her eighty-seventh year. Her father was Rev. Charles Mason, an Episcopal clergyman who for some time was settled in Salem, and later was rector of a Boston parish in the West End. Her mother was Susan Lawrence. The family home had been in Brimmer street for a number of years.

Mrs. Oliver was a member of the Church of the Advent, of which her late husband, Dr. Oliver, was for many years one of the wardens; and in her earlier years she had kept in close touch with the various parochial activities. The Church Home Society, which was founded by her father many years back, was another one of the diocesan philanthropies in which she was interested, and at one time she was a member of its board of managers.

The surviving members of Mrs. Oliver's family include four sons and one daughter, Charles Edward Oliver, Andrew Oliver, Edward Pulling Oliver and Dr. Everard Lawrence Oliver, and Miss Susan Lawrence Oliver, all of this city. A granddaughter is Mrs. Morgan H. Plummer of Beverly Farms; and there are two sisters, Mrs. Hasket Derby (Sarah Mason) of 383 Marlboro street and Mrs. John Chipman Gray (Nina L. Mason) of 176 Beacon street. There also are three great grandchildren.

... Of the latter class is the octavo volume of voluminous extracts from the Diary of William Pynchon, a Salem Tory who did not fly from home during the Revolution, and whose jottings in an important time Dr. Fitch Edward Oliver has prepared for the press. Here and there is an interesting picture or useful bit of record, but the entries are largely meteorological or trivial, and their prevalent brevity is no merit. The reader wishes for less of some things, and more of others. There is greater interest and value in ten pages of Samuel Sewall's diary, of a hundred years before, than in this whole volume. (9×6 inches, cloth, pp. ix, 349. Boston: Houghton, Mifflin, & Co. Price, $3.00.)

JUDGE STEVENS.

Death of a Prominent Clinton Lawyer and Financier.

Clinton, June 14.—The venerable Judge C. G. Stevens died at his home on Church st. last night, after a lingering illness of a complication of diseases. Judge Stevens was engaged in the active practice of law up to within the past year, when he retired on account of ill-health. Since then he has gradually failed. At his bedside when he passed away were the members of his family.

Judge Stevens was born in New Hampshire in 1823, and attended the public schools of his native town. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1840, and shortly after came to Lancaster, where he began the practice of his profession.

A few years later Mr. Stevens was the leading spirit in this town's application for separation from Lancaster and was the leading citizen when Clinton became a town in 1850.

It was Judge Stevens who guided the town in the first years of its existence and ever since he has given freely his advice to its officials. In 1857 Mr. Stevens was appointed justice of the district court of eastern Worcester and held that position for a number of years. He served the town as representative and later in the senate, and for a decade was the leading citizen and public man in this section.

That Judge Stevens was popular and well liked was attested by the fact that for 20 years he served the town as moderator. Although a republican, he was in no way radical.

Mr. Stevens was president of the First National Bank from its foundation to within a year, when he resigned on account of ill-health. He was counsel for the bank and several large corporations in this vicinity. In his day he was one of the leading lawyers of Worcester county. He was a warm personal friend of Judge J. W. Corcoran.

Judge Stevens was 78 years old. He left a wife, one son, Col. E. G. Stevens, who served as a member on Gov. Rice's staff, and who is now engaged in business in Boston, and Miss Marguerite Helen, residing at home.

REV. WILLIAM COWPER FOSTER

Rev. William Cowper Foster died at Middletown, Ct., Oct. 31, aged eighty-two. He was born in Hanover, N. H., July 8, 1815. His parents were Richard and Irene Foster. He was the second of eleven children, ten of them sons. Two of these children died in infancy. Of the remaining nine, seven were graduated from Dartmouth College, while the only daughter received a liberal education. The mother, Mrs. Irene Foster, practically read through the library of Dartmouth College while her sons were receiving an education. Of the seven sons at Dartmouth six became ministers and one a lawyer.

William C. Foster was graduated from Dartmouth in 1841 and from Union Theological Seminary in 1844. After supplying at Exeter, N. H., and Westboro, Mass., he was ordained pastor of the church in Cuyahoga Falls, O., Oct. 13, 1847. His subsequent pastorates were Shawmut Church, Boston, Mass., from 1849 to 1852; Central Church, Lawrence, Mass., from 1852 to 1857; Becket, Mass., from 1860 to 1863. From 1863 to 1869 he was evangelist of Hampden County, Mass. In 1857 and 1858 he supplied a pulpit in Chicago, and from 1869 to 1872 he preached at Percival, Io. He married as his first wife Mary Ann Elliott of Middletown, Ct., and after her death her sister, Almira Gillett Elliott.

In the course of his ministry he labored in more than thirty revivals, in which more than a thousand persons found Christ. He preached with peculiar searching power, having rare success in bringing men to a conviction of sin. In his evangelistic work he followed up his preaching with house to house visitation, in which his conversations and prayers won numbers to Christ. His labors in this work were so intense that finally his health gave way. He became nearly blind, and for twenty-five years he lived in retirement at Middletown, Ct.

Mr. Foster leaves behind him a widow and seven children, four daughters and three sons. Only two of his brothers survive him—Rev. Davis Foster, D.D., of Winchendon, Mass., and Rev. Richard Baxter Foster D.D., of Kingfisher, Okl.

MRS. GARDINER GREENE HUBBARD

Former Resident of Boston, Widow of First President of American Bell Telephone Co., Is Victim of Automobile Accident in Washington

Oct 20/09

Mrs. Gertrude M. Hubbard, widow of Gardiner Greene Hubbard, the Boston inventor, scientist and philanthropist, and mother of Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell and of Mrs. Charles J. Bell, died at Garfield Hospital in Washington last night. Death resulted from a fracture of the skull when Mrs. Hubbard was hurled from an automobile which was struck by a street car. She was eighty-four years old.

Mrs. Hubbard was riding with her sister, Mrs. Charles Nash of Morristown, N. J., near her home, "Twin Oaks," Woodley Lane, when a piece of rought road on Connecticut avenue prompted the chauffeur, Alexander Nelson, to run on to the car tracks for smoother running. As he did so a Capitol traction car, bound for Chevy Chase, struck the machine and the impact threw Mrs. Hubbard out of her vehicle. She struck on her head. Mrs. Nash and the chauffeur were not injured.

Major Eli K. Cole of the United States Marine Corps reached the scene shortly after the collision occurred. He was operating a motor car and in this Mrs. Hubbard and Mrs. Nash were placed and taken to the hospital. Mrs. Hubbard did not recover consciousness.

Mrs. Hubabrd was born in New York, but lived in Boston for a number of years prior to 1880, when she went to Washington with her husband. They were prominent in the life of the capital. One of her two daughters became the wife of Professor Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, and her other daughter married his cousin, Charles J. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Company. Mrs. Hubbard had many friends and relatives in Massachusetts. Her late husband was a brother of Charles Eustis Hubbard, the well-known attorney of this city, who lives in Cambridge. Another relative is Frederic Tracy Hubbard of Stoughton.

Mrs. Hubbard was widely known in Washington society circles. Her husband, who was the first president of the American Bell Telephone Company, was distinguished as a scientist and geographer and as the founder of the National Geographic Society. During the lifetime of her husband and subsequently, the Hubbard town house, at Connecticut avenue and Dupont Circle, was a social centre for the most prominent scientists of the country. After Mr. Hubbard's death Mrs. Hubbard retained possession of this residence until recently, when she sold it to Edson Bradley of New York.

"Twin Oaks," the estate on Woodley Lane, where she resided, is situated near Woodley, the former home of Grover Cleveland and now occupied by Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada. Nearby is the country place of Admiral Dewey, and there are several splendid country residences in the neighborhood. Mrs. Hubbard, who received a comfortable fortune from her husband, erected as a tribute to his memory the handsome Gardiner Hubbard Memorial Hall at Sixteenth and M streets, which is the official home of the National Geographical Society. Mrs. Hubbard's malden name was Gertrude M. McCurdy, and she was the daughter of Robert H. McCurdy of New York.

July 26, 1814, and died at Jefferson City, Missouri, May 15, 1849, æ. 34. He taught in Va; went thence to Bowling Green, Missouri, in 1848, and died absent from home.

* JAMES JACKSON, the son of Jeremiah and Anna (Niles) Jackson, was born at Coventry, now Benton, Nov. 19, 1814, and was drowned in the Savannah river near Bonaventure, Geo. Mar. 19, 1845, æ. 30. He studied divinity at And. Theo. Sem. 2 years and 6 months in the class of 1844, and finished his course at the Episc. Theo. Sem. at Alexandria, Va, graduating in 1844; was ordained a Deacon of the Prot. Episc. Ch. by the Rt Rev. Richard Channing Moore, D. D. Bishop of Va, at Alexandria, July 14, 1844; went thence to Savannah, Geo. to supply Christ Ch. in the absence of its rector for 4 months; after this, was chosen assistant minister at St John's Ch. in that city. There his services were highly appreciated, but failing health, in his efforts to regain it, led to an untimely end, to the great grief of relatives and his admiring parish. He was never married.

* JOHN WYMAN JONES, A. M. the son of John and Ruth (Arven) Jones, was born at Enfield, May 2, 1822. He read law with John George Britton, D. C. 1832, and Amos K. Hadley of Troy, N. MRS. SARAH WHITE MASON. 1906

Newton, March 12.—The death is announced at Yonkers, N. Y., Sunday, of Mrs. Sarah White Mason, who for more than 50 years had been a resident of Newton. She died after a brief illness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward P. Mowton. She was 83 yrs. old.

She was the widow of David Haven Mason, who died in office as U. S. attorney for the district of Massachusetts in 1873. She contributed largely to her husband's success by her unwavering sympathy and love, and during her many years of widowhood displayed to her children and grandchildren the most exquisite dignity and purity of character.

Of her six children two daughters died during her lifetime and four children survive her. They are Mabel White Mowton of Yonkers, New York; Edward Haven Mason of Boston, Henry White Mason of Brookline and Frank Atlee Mason of Newton. Thirteen grandchildren survive her.

MRS. GEORGIANNA S. BARROWS

Nov 8, 1914

Widow of Hon. George Bradley Barrows Was a Native of Fryeburg, Me., and Long Active There in Church and Missionary Work

Mrs. Georgianna Souther Barrows, widow of Hon. George Bradley Barrows of Fryeburg, Me., died at her winter home, 98 Gainsboro street, Boston, on Sunday morning, after a short illness. Mrs. Barrows was born in Fryeburg on Feb. 26, 1828, the daughter of Samuel and Mary Webster) Souther. She was educated at Fryeburg Academy and the Freehold, N. J., Seminary for Girls, in which institution she was afterward a teacher. She was married to George B. Barrows in June, 1855, and the remainder of her life was spent in the family homestead at Fryeburg, although recently she had spent the winters in Boston, with her children.

Mrs. Barrows was a devoted member of the Congregational Church in Fryeburg, becoming a member in 1844. She was active in all affairs of the church and the Sunday school, and was widely known through the State for her association with the broader activities of the church. Several times she was one of the delegates from Maine to the National Council. She was especially interested in the mission work of the church, both in her own State and in the foreign field, and during her active years in Boston was an attendant at the meetings of the Woman's Board.

Mrs. Barrows was a member of the Woman's Club of Fryeburg, and took a lively interest in the various lines of women's work. She was particularly interested in historical matters and was a recognized authority on local history. Possessed of a retentive memory and a keen observation, her active mind held a remarkable grasp on past and present events.

She is survived by three children, Miss Anna Barrows, an instructor at Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York; Miss Mary Barrows of Whitcomb & Barrows, publishers in Boston; and John S. Barrows, a Boston newspaperman, well known in the National Lancers and in patriotic societies.

CHARLES CUMMINGS

For Thirty Years Principal of the Medford High School

Mr. Charles Cummings, for thirty years principal of the Medford High School, died yesterday at his home, corner of Main and George streets, from old age. He leaves one son, City Auditor George D. Cummings. He was born in Hollis, N. H., and when a boy worked in a store at Amherst, N. H. He entered Pepperell Academy and during part of the time there acted as assistant teacher. He was graduated at Dartmouth in the class of 1842. He entered Andover Theological Seminary the same year and although absent nearly two years filling the position of principal of Abington Union Academy he was graduated in 1846. During the last year of his theological studies his health failed, which led him to give up trying for the ministry and devote himself to teaching.

In 1846 he was chosen for the principalship of Medford High School. The first boy to receive a diploma from him and the only boy in the class of 1847 was General Samuel C. Lawrence. Mr. Cummings retired as principal of the school in 1870, when he was tendered a reception and a purse of gold in recognition of his faithful services.

Mr. Cummings was a citizen of Medford for sixty-one years. He was one of a committee of three appointed by the town in 1855 to consider the establishment of a public library, and was one of the first library trustees appointed the next year. Since his teaching days ended he had devoted himself to local historical work, having written a history of the Medford High School, a history of Mystic Congregational Church, of which he was long a deacon, and sketches of the town life of 1850-60.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon.

A Search for an Old [illegible]

[The following page was prepared by Mr. Martin for the usual "Old Folks'" Department, but pressure of other matter prevented its publication before the "Corner anniversary."]

"HE DOETH ALL THINGS WELL"

Three years ago this poem was called for and two stanzas of it printed (Jan. 31, April 18, 1903). The avalanche of letters that followed showed the wide popularity of the piece fifty years ago as sung in the church singing schools. Being published over a ficticious signature there has been from time to time question as to its authorship, and in recent years repeated discussion of rival claims in the Notes and Queries of the Boston Transcript, without seeming, however, to settle it. Having corresponded widely and searched old files of papers, I propose now to give the result, after first printing the poem entire, for the benefit of the many hundreds of our Old Folks, who will, I know, recall its words and begin to hum its music, even if I have for once to trespass on the supposed good nature of the Despotic Foreman—who by the way, I learn from his early contemporaries was once a fine singer himself; no doubt he played it on the flute!

I remember how I loved her when a little guiltless child,
I saw her in the cradle, as she looked on me and smiled;
My cup of happiness was full, my joy words cannot tell;
And I blessed the glorious Giver, who "doeth all things well."

Months passed—that bud of promise was unfolding every hour.
I thought that earth had never smiled upon a fairer flower,
So beautiful it well might grace the bow'rs where angels dwell,
And waft its fragrance to His throne who "doeth all things well."

Years fled—that little sister then was dear as life to me,
And woke in my unconscious heart a wild idolatry;
I worshiped at an earthly shrine, lured by some magic spell,
Forgetful of the praise of Him who "doeth all things well."

She was the lovely star, whose light around my pathway shone,
Amid this darksome vale of tears through which I journey on;
Its radiance had obscured the light which round His throne doth dwell,
And I wandered far away from Him who "doeth all things well."

That star went down in beauty, yet it shineth sweetly now
In the bright and dazzling coronet that decks the Saviour's brow.
She bowed to the Destroyer, whose shafts none may repel,
But we know, for God hath told us, "He doeth all things well."

I remember well my sorrow, as I stood beside her bed,
And my deep and heartfelt anguish when they told me she was dead;
And oh! that cup of bitterness—let not my heart rebel,
God gave—He took—He will restore—"He doeth all things well."

The author was Miss Elizabeth Lavinia Dyer of South Abington (now Whitman), Mass., born in 1817, and married in 1848 to Mr. Charles Cummings, who was for thirty years principal of the high school at Medford, where he still resides; she died in 1899. She wrote the poem on the death of her sister Helen, who died April 1, 1843, at the age of seven. Asa Bullard's S. S. Visitor of that year (page 208) had a touching obituary of the child. I have seen at Mr. Cummings's the author's commonplace book, containing in her own hand numerous poems of her own composition, many of which appeared from time to time in the Boston Recorder, the Mother's Assistant and elsewhere, over different signatures. The first of these compositions was "suggested on visiting my sister's grave" (the same sister), dated June, 1843. Later is the above poem, entitled, "Tribute to the memory of my sister; He doeth all things well." This is dated August, 1843—evidently when written—with this added, "Mass. Ploughman."

The scrap-book of her printed articles was left to her niece in Marshfield (daughter of the late Rev. Ebenezer Alden), and contains among many other cuttings this poem, headed "For the Ploughman," entitled "Tribute to my sister," and signed "F. M. E., South Abington, Feb. 16. 1844" It was afterward set to music by I. B. Woodbury, and published in sheet form by Reed, Boston, 1847, and no doubt may be found in some of his singing-books. The title is, "He doeth all things well, or, My Sister, a Ballad, Words by F. M. E." Those initials are easily explained. Miss Dyer was very modest as to the appearance of her name in print and so in place of her own initials, E. L. D., took the next letters in the alphabet, F. M. E. This was well understood in the family, and expressly indicated in her own writing in her collections.

The piece was apparently set to music before 1847, for in a recent publication (in a local paper) of reminiscences of a trip to Mt. Washington in 1846 special mention is made that that hymn was sung. Mr. Cummings went to Medford in 1846 and found the "ballad" already introduced there by Miss Wilder, who had learned it from Rev. E. Porter Dyer, a brother of the writer, then a city missionary in Boston. Finally, when in the sixties Mr. Dyer heard it sung by the Hutchinsons and another name suggested as author he published it in the Recorder, with explicit statement as to its connection with his own family.

These details are given because of the fact that the second edition of "Bowdoin Poets," published in 1849, contains the same poem, attributed to Dr. Edward M. Field of Bangor, of the Class of 1845, afterward a Bangor physician. As he wrote in verse often and well, and his initials reversed corresponded to those signed to the article, it was naturally claimed by the editor of the volume as his, and has been regarded as such by his friends, especially in connection with the fact that a sister of his had died in childhood. On referring, however, to his family genealogy I find that the sister died, at the age of a year and a half, in 1813—nine years before he was born. This of course disagrees entirely with the whole tone of the poem, in which the writer "saw" the child, and watched its progress as the "years fled," and was "told" that she was dead.

As Dr. Field was a gentleman of the most absolute integrity, the only explanation I can make is that he saw the poem soon after its publication, when in college, and copied it for his mother. The family supposed it to be his own, and it afterward became confounded with some poem of consolation which he did write. A supposition like this gains credence from a letter received from a lady in Maine, recalling that the poem was read at the funeral of the child. Of course this poem could not have been read, by whomsoever written, but the fact that some poem was used on the occcasion would strengthen the impression that it was the one afterward published.

(Later.) I have just found the poem in Joshua Leavitt's Fourth Reader, copyrighted, Boston, 1847, where it is explicitly attributed to "Miss Dyer." This, at so early a date, confirms the conclusion reached above. I have also found it in the Thanksgiving, an old singing-book by Leonard Marshall, once published by Ditson, who still has that page (342) in sheet form. There it is marked, "I. B. Woodbury, 1845." (The name of that compiler awakens an almost forgotten memory of my earliest childhood, viz., that "a singing-master by the name of Marshall" used as he rode past our house to ask me to "say apple pie"—presumably because of the musical manner in which I rendered it! I have never heard the name since—was he identical with this Mr. Marshall?—I suppose Mr. L. O. Emerson would know!)

REV. ALLEN HAZEN, D. D.

Dr. Hazen, who died at his home in Washington, May 12, was well and widely known for his life work in the Marathi Mission of the A. B. C. F. M. He was born in Hartford, Vt., Nov. 30, 1822, son of Rev. Austin Hazen, for many years pastor of the churches in Hartford and Berlin, Vt. His mother was Frances Mary, daughter of Israel Putnam Dana, who bore the name of his grandfather, Israel Putnam. He graduated from Dartmouth College in 1842, and from Andover in 1845, having among his classmates such men as A. H. Clapp, W. T. Eustis, S. B. Fairbank, his associate of many years in India, and R. S. Storrs. He married, Sept. 18, 1846, Martha Ramsey Chapin of Somers, Ct., who had been at Mt. Holyoke, as pupil and teacher, from the beginning and whose sister Mary was principal of the seminary for many years. They sailed at once for India, where he remained until 1872, stationed at Bombay and Ahmednagar, and by his activity, skill and devotion holding an honorable place among the Board's missionaries. His alma mater conferred the degree of D. D. in 1873.

Dr. Hazen was in this country two or three years from 1860; and, in 1872, the failure of his wife's health made necessary their final return and resignation. Here he served the churches in Pomfret, Vt., 1875-77; Norwich, 1877-79; Agawam, Mass., 1880-81; Deerfield, 1882-89, his wife dying there, and there he was laid beside her May 14. His last ministry was in Hartland, Vt., 1889-91, and again in 1894. He was a delegate to the London International Congregational Council and from that went on to India, and once more spent two years in the land where his heart was and in the work he loved. Since 1895 he has made his home in Washington with his son Henry Allen Hazen, of the Signal Service, enjoying the devoted care of his daughter Mary. Another daughter, Frances, is the wife of Rev. L. F. Gates, a missionary at Sholapur. While Dr. Hazen was in college, his cousin, Rev. Austin H. Wright, joined the Nestorian mission. This doubtless strengthened, if it did not awaken, his own purpose to devote himself to missionary work; and his sister Sophia, after some years of association with Miss Lyon at South Hadley, joined also the Nestorian mission as the wife of the eminent missionary, David T. Stoddard.

HOME AND SCHOOL TRAINING.

By HIRAM ORCUTT, LL. D.

With Sketch of the Author's Life and Portrait.

12mo. 310 pages. Price, $1.00.

Sent by mail on receipt of price.

This is a new edition of a well-known book, revised and enlarged. The new chapter on Physical Culture is exhaustive and adapted equally to the nursery and the school-room. Its title indicates the aim of the author, viz.: to survey briefly the entire educational field from the standpoint of home, and to aid parents, teachers and school officers in their mutual relations and important work. It is of equal interest and importance to each of these three classes of educators, for they must understand each other, and coöperate, or fail to secure satisfactory results.

A few testimonials are here added:

I find Mr. Orcutt's "Home and School Training" a suitable and very valuable sequel to the "Teacher's Manual," written by him. It is the impersonation of good sense and practical wisdom on a subject of supreme interest and importance.

From Rev. S. I. PRIME, D. D., Editor-in-Chief of the N. Y. Observer.

I have been looking over your books ("Home and School Training" and "The Teacher's Manual"). They are my views so exactly, it seems as though I had written some of the chapters.

From Hon. EDWARD CONANT, late Supt. of Education, State of Vt.

I hasten to say that I have read your "Home and School Training" through with delight. Every page is bright, clear, healthful and hopeful. I wish that every parent, teacher and youth in the land would read it. For sound sense, and as presenting directions for practical use in a serviceable shape, I doubt if the work has an equal.

From Rev. DE WITT C. DURGIN, Pres. of Hillsdale (Mich.) College.

I have read with pleasure and profit the two volumes from your pen, and do not hesitate to pronounce them invaluable helps—the one to every teacher and the other to every parent, teacher and school officer—to the right performance of their respective duties. The "Teacher's Manual" should be in every school, and "Home and School Training" in every household.

From Hon. J. W. SIMONDS, President University of Dakota.

The excellent ideas, good sense, good taste, correct style, which characterize "The Teacher's Manual," and still more "Home and School Training," place the author among the best thinkers and writers of our time.

From the Congregationalist.

Dr. Hiram Orcutt's "Home and School Training" has been published before, but this edition has an additional chapter, and has been carefully revised. It is a survey of the whole educational field, and is the outgrowth of years of practical and diversified experience on the part of one of the most successful teachers in the history of our country. It is intended to aid parents, teachers and school officers, and it is well adapted to its intent. The new chapter is upon Physical Culture, and a supplement outlines the chief facts in the author's career.

c33067

From Prof. H. O. LADD, President of College, Santa Fé, New Mexico.

"Home and School Training" has grown out of Mr. Orcutt's varied experience with youth, and is firmly rooted in truth and good sense. It has chapters of peculiar excellence, such as those on Character and Habits, Intellectual Culture, and Physical Culture, which ought to reach every household and every heart that is concerned with the teaching of children.

From the Boston Herald.

It is pleasant to find Dr. Hiram Orcutt's "Home and School Training" retaining in its new edition all the solid common sense and right thinking which made it so great a favorite with teachers of experience when it first appeared. Its expositions of the need of unquestioning obedience, and of the absurdity of over-persuasion, have never been surpassed, and it is an admirable antidote for much which is gravely written for teachers, and solemnly received by them. Considering the excuses frequently offered for school rebellions, it is delightful to find an author who declares that it is better to maintain the authority of a bad teacher rather than to permit the pupils to fancy that they have effected his removal, and his prophecy that boys who are permitted to defy authority in school, are likely to become bad citizens. The chapters dealing with home training are sensible and instructive, and are especially to be commended to over-indulgent parents.

From the Boston Post.

Hiram Orcutt's "Home and School Training" surveys the entire educational field from the standpoint of home, and is designed to aid parents, teachers and school officers in their mutual relations. The author's long experience as parent, teacher and supervisor of schools, has qualified him to speak understandingly upon the subjects treated. . . . . The new chapter upon physical culture is exhaustive, and adapted equally to the nursery and the school-room; and the Supplement, treating of the life and labors of the author, will especially interest the many who have been his pupils, assistants or associates, during the forty years of his school work.

From the Journal of Education.

Notwithstanding the great mass of educational literature claiming the attention of parents and teachers, it would be difficult to find any book covering exactly the same ground as this, which with due emphasis upon the physical, intellectual and industrial training of the child, shows in its true light the importance of ethical education and the up-building of character. The responsibility of parents to the schools, and the interdependence of parents and teachers, are points which are seldom touched upon, nor is it as generally recognized as it should be, that the basic principles of home and school training are identical. Dr. Orcutt's wide experiences, gained from nearly a half century's active work in educational circles in many capacities, enable him to give practical answers to practical questions, and to show in this dual education the boundless possibilities for the highest moral, mental and physical culture.

From the San Francisco Evening Bulletin.

We are very much inclined to believe that Dr. Orcutt is a public benefactor. This belief is founded on the perusal of his "Home and School Training." It seems to be brim full of good sense, put in plain, vigorous language. The author is progressive, yet moderate in his views. We heartily commend the book to the perusal of parents and teachers.

From the Literary World.

Dr. Orcutt's books ought to be read by every teacher, parent and school officer. We feel sure there is not one in the land who cannot learn something from them.

The Teacher's Manual,

By HIRAM ORCUTT, LL.D.

Containing a Treatise upon the Discipline of the School, and other Papers upon the Teacher's Qualification and Work.

12mo. 302 pp. Price $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price.

New and Enlarged Edition...Just Issued.

In this book, the author has presented the results of forty-two years of successful experience in the management and instruction of schools. The hearty approval of the Press and thousands of readers, among whom are many leaders in the profession, has induced the author to revise and enlarge the book. Two chapters (32 pages) upon the "Educational Tramp," and "The Teacher's Relations to Parents," have been added, yet the price remains the same. It will be found a work of special value to young teachers, and will be read with interest by all.

From numerous recommendations received by the publishers, the following are selected.

From Prof. WM. S. TYLER, D. D., LL. D., Amherst College.

"I have read Mr. Orcutt's 'Teacher's Manual' with unflagging attention and interest straight through, and have no hesitation in saying that in it he has rendered a very valuable service to teachers and the cause of education. While he has shown rare good sense and practical wisdom, the fruit of large experience, in his whole treatise on the 'Discipline of the School,' I have been especially delighted with the chapters on the 'Discipline of the Bible in our Schools,' and the 'Discipline of Good Manners,' as being especially timely, faithful and wise."

From Prof. EDWIN D. SANBORN, LL. D., of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

"This book contains the natural results of long experience, patient labor, and successful tuition. Young teachers who will read, mark, and inwardly digest the precepts it contains, will be greatly aided in the organization, discipline, and instruction of their schools."

From Hon. T. W. BICKNELL, LL. D., Editor of Journal of Education, Boston.

"'The Teacher's Manual' is a capital book, and is just what one might expect from so able a teacher as Hiram Orcutt. It was my good fortune to be his pupil, and his impress as an instructor and gentleman I can never lose. His valuable experience enables him to become the teacher of many teachers, and the Manual of School Tactics is as valuable to the professional teacher as the Manual of Arms to the professional soldier."

From Hon. RICHARD B. KIMBALL, LL. D., Author of "St. Leger," "Cuba and the Cubans," etc.

"This work supplies a want which teachers have always experienced, namely, a concise, clear, practical exposition of all that relates to their labors and duties. In fact, it is a complete Vade Mecum for every person engaged in the instruction of children or youth. I hope a copy of the Manual will find its way into the hands of every teacher in America."

c330d3

From Hon. HENRY BARNARD, late National Commis'n'r of Education.

"On the subject of Discipline, or the agencies by which the successful management of a school can be secured, the treatise is full of practical suggestions, the result of long and varied experience. On the other topics there are valuable remarks, but on this the author dwells with the consciousness of his own positive success."

From Prof. D. J. NOYES, D. D., Dartmouth College.

"The subject discussed is one of great importance, and the book, ('The Teacher's Manual') is calculated to do good. Mr. Orcutt has done his work well, and deserves the thanks of the community."

From Hon. J. ORMOND WILSON, Supt. of Schools, Washington, D. C.

"The book is excellent; full of good, practical ideas, forcibly and concisely expressed."

From Hon. JOHN D. PHILBRICK, LL. D., late Supt. of Public Schools, City of Boston.

"The distinguished author deserves thanks for his honest effort to give young teachers, in this handsome form, the best results of his ripe experience."

From Hon. NEWMAN BATEMAN, Pres. Knox College, Galesburg, Ill.

"I have examined 'Orcutt's Teacher's Manual' with much interest and care, and consider it a very valuable addition to the number of useful works already published for the special benefit and improvement of teachers. A copy of this book should be in every teacher's library."

"I have read with much pleasure Prof. Orcutt's 'Teacher's Manual.' It is full of sound advice and invaluable suggestions to teachers."

From PROF. W. F. PHELPS, Supt. of Schools, Winona, Minn.

"I have read Prof. Orcutt's book with much interest. It will be perused with great profit, especially by young teachers, and I cordially commend it to the attention of all such as desire to win success in their noble profession."

From The Journal of Education.

"This is a new and enlarged edition of the well-known treatise upon the discipline of the school, and other suggestive, practical papers upon the teacher's qualifications and work. We commend 'The Teacher's Manual' to all engaged in the teacher's work, believing that there is no work in print more helpful and suggestive than this. The book has an excellent portrait of the author, and is printed in excellent style and well bound."

From the Wisconsin Journal of Education.

"We commend Orcutt's 'Teacher's Manual' most heartily, as containing really multum in parvo."

A sketch of the Author's life is in each volume.

AMONG THE THEOLOGIES.

HIRAM ORCUTT, LL.D.

AUTHOR OF "THE CLASS BOOK OF PROSE AND POETRY," "GLEANINGS FROM SCHOOL LIFE EXPERIENCE," "TEACHER'S MANUAL," "PARENTS' MANUAL," AND "SCHOOL KEEPING: HOW TO DO IT."

Opinions of the Press.

This book is the outcome of long years of prayerful study by a man who, through a long life of wonderful success as an educator, has always by timely, guiding counsel sought to lead his charges to a wholesome knowledge of the Bible and to a clear perception of the principles of right living. Suffice it to say that the spirit of this work is liberal, progressive, yet moderate, and that it claims the attention of every thinking person. — The Dartmouth.

The premises are well and consistently chosen; the book has a steady and logical movement; the conclusions are carefully drawn. We commend the strength of the work as well as the optimistic tenor of its conclusions. — Dartmouth Literary Monthly.

It is not always pleasant to take a trip into and through the theologies. The guide needs special wisdom and skill else the party will get lost, especially when the old footpaths are forsaken. But Dr. Orcutt finds his way along very well, and his comments as he goes are interesting, if not always convincing. The atmosphere on the journey is not as stifling as it used to be. There is much sunshine, and the sound of cheerful voices is heard. — Christian Union.

This thoughtful book is one of the striking signs of the times and of the great Revolt. It is full of suggestive points, calculated to make readers think. It is earnest and religious in tone. — Boston Post.

Dr. Orcutt's lay theology is thus in line with the larger hope which has always been natural to the mind not perverted by ecclesiasticism or dogmatic theology. — Literary World.

The spirit of this book is broad and tolerant and is pervaded by a deep devotional sentiment, and may be read with like interest and profit by all enlightened religious thinkers. — Saturday Evening Gazette.

E330.1

It is an honest and fair expression of the evolution of religious thought, and is treated respectfully. The book is a worthy addition to the long list of works which show that we are to-day at the parting of the theological ways, and that man must be a dullard or bigot who will not concede that the earnestness that characterizes the crisis is a guaranty that the new direction will make for righteousness and truth, even if it steps aside from old and well-trodden paths. — Boston Globe.

"Among the Theologies" will be read with very great interest by old school and new school theologians. It handles with great fairness the various topics introduced. It is worth reading. It will give help, comfort, and consolation to many who are troubled about the various theological dogmas discussed. — Boston Traveller.

Hiram Orcutt, LL.D., though a layman, evidently has made theology a pretty close study, and has arrived at conclusions quite at variance with many who have "Rev." before their names. Whether the reader can accept his conclusions or not, he will be impressed with his method of presenting them and the devout spirit of the author. — Salem Register.

This is a book which all clergymen should read. When the church calls upon the people generally, clergy and laity alike, to accept certain doctrines, it becomes the privilege and duty of laymen, as well as clergymen, to examine those doctrines and judge for their validity. Every preacher ought to know, as far as possible, how the tenets he inculcates appear to the minds of the thoughtful, devout, and independent laymen. Few if any books will be so useful in aiding such inquiries as "Among the Theologies." — Boston Advertiser.

This vigorous little book is the late fruit of one of the most distinguished educators in New England. His pen has ever been active and trenchant on topics pertaining to his profession, and he has shown himself often a keen thinker and a courageous writer on many themes that pertain to morals and practical life. A spirit of fairness, candor, and reverence pervades the book, and it gathers up many valuable opinions from men of mark which give a vivid picture of the steps of progress in theology. It is a very interesting little volume. — Wisconsin State Journal.

E330j2

This book will command very wide attention, coming as it does from a man of the highest reputation for scholarship and Christian integrity, and who has been a member of the Orthodox church for more than half a century, from which standpoint his investigations into the theologies are made with a faithfulness and fearlessness that can but command universal respect. It is a very able and carefully prepared work. — Boston Home Journal.

Dr. Orcutt in the last analysis fails to find any help in Arminianism or Calvinism. Evidently he shares with Canon Farrar in the "larger hope," and holds liberal views as to probation, or rather he fails to find any scriptural evidence of one probation, not believing with the Calvinists that mankind had its only probation in Adam, and through him lost it. — Morning Star.

"Among the Theologies," by Hiram Orcutt, LL.D., is a pleasant exception to the general dullness of this class of books. Those who are not bound by an inflexible creed and are in search for truth will read this book with profit and advantage. — Boston Herald.

"Among the Theologies," by Hiram Orcutt, LL.D., is a little book embodying the results of the author's thinking upon many of the leading current questions of theology. It is, to some extent, in harmony with the "new" theology, and possesses a certain interest for those who are studying the same themes. — Congregationalist.

The author, Dr. Hiram Orcutt, is a prominent Orthodox layman, well known for his contributions to educational themes.

Is this book orthodox? By the views held fifty years ago, it is not. By the standards and authoritative creeds of Orthodoxy, it is not. It serves to remind us, however, that there is a new Orthodoxy silently growing into power and influence, and preaching a buoyant and hopeful gospel which better deserves the name of glad tidings. That this new movement has obstacles to meet cannot be doubted; but they are not those which old-fashioned heresy had to contend with. This spirit of the New Orthodoxy the Old Orthodoxy will be powerless to resist. Eventually it will find that its own line of development lies inevitably in this direction of a larger Christian hope, and that its prosperity will depend upon the ardor with which it holds it. — Christian Register.

THE reminiscences contained in this little volume were originally prepared solely for the author's family and intimate friends; but in response to numerous requests from many of his old pupils it has been decided to issue them in book form. The author's life has been in a large measure a public one, and his efforts have had a far-reaching influence, which has given to the story of his early struggles, his trials and his triumphs, more than personal significance. Although the greater portion of his labors was in school life, yet the object-lessons to be drawn from them appeal to parents and citizens as well as to those who have devoted their lives to educational work.

This book is the record of a long and eventful school life, covering more than three-quarters of a century. It recites the incidents and anecdotes which interested the author all along the way, in his boyhood in the old district school, academy, and college, and in professional life. It records the struggles of the poor young man in his efforts to gain a liberal education. The author dwells upon his experience as a teacher, and illustrates his methods in conducting the different grades of schools over which he presided during forty years. He marks the changes which the process of evolution has wrought in the educational history of the country, comparing the old with the new, and commenting upon the condition of these institutions and their relations to each other and upon other practical topics.

(From the "Journal of Education.")

DR. ORCUTT, now in his eighty-fourth year, was one of the remarkable educators of his day. For more than three-quarters of a century he has been connected with the schools of New England, and it is every way fitting that he should give the fraternity in his later life so worthy a recital of his experiences as is within these covers. It is one of the best autobiographies ever written by a schoolmaster, and makes delightful reading for any one. He is a typical New Englander, coming from a humble rural home in New Hampshire to spend his later life in well-earned comfort in a city home. He had the typical New England education from the little red schoolhouse and country academy to his graduation from Dartmouth, wearing for many years her highest honor — LL.D. He was the typical schoolmaster from winter district schools in Rockingham and Barre, Vt., and Andover and Wellfleet, Mass., to the principalship of several academies, membership in all the leading educational associations, and service on the New Hampshire State Board of Education.

But the book has an interest above and beyond the personal element in it, for it is the record of the educational conditions all the way along from fifteen years before the advent of Horace Mann to the present hour. Nowhere else is there to be found in the same compass or for the same money — and I know not where it can be found for any price in one volume — such an entertaining and comprehensive view and review of the educational situations now and back through seventy-five years. It is a book, even aside from the personality of the author, that must find a place in all libraries that seek a record of the schools old and new.

MRS. BELL OF BOSTON

A Beautiful Tribute to A Brilliant and Beloved Woman

MRS. BELL, by Pauline Cony Drown; Houghton Mifflin Company. 87 pp. $1.25.

It is only a few years since the death of Helen Choate Bell, but most of those in the generation that knew her intimately and loved her well have passed from the scene. Mrs. Drown, who was very close to her through many years, has prepared this little memorial volume. She calls it "simply my own tribute," but it says in delightful fashion the gracious things about Mrs. Bell's rare personality and high talents which her friends were saying through more than half a century. "From childhood she had the world of men and women at her feet, and kept it there."

Helen Choate, daughter of Rufus Choate and cousin of Joseph Choate, and with all the best of Essex county traditions behind her, married very young her brilliant cousin, Joseph Bell. She was early left a widow and lived all through the years that followed with her sister, Mrs. Pratt, on Chestnut street. We are told that she was the "most sought-after woman in Boston" from girlhood into old age. And as the years passed she acquired a national, and even international, reputation for pertinent and spontaneous wit. Asked if she ever had children, she exclaimed "Baby! No, I might have had a grand piano, or a Webster's Unabridged!"

Mrs. Drown's pages are given largely to Mrs. Bell's shrewd comment on life and books, on the persons she met and the happenings of the day. She published nothing, but she was a tireless letter writer and she was a great talker. Music was perhaps her master passion, but she was a lover of books, with no end of enthusiasms both among the good old books and those of a later day. She disliked foreign travel, partly because of the discomforts of long journeys, but more on account of her intense and aggressive Americanism. She had little use for country life because "she was a lover of the city, of men and women, books and music and talk over the fire; she loved coziness and friends and an underlying sadness comes out when she is left alone with nature."

The little book tempts quotation on every page. When well along in years she explained her fondness for the services of the Church of the Advent by saying, "I can't see, I can't hear, so I like to smell my religion." Rudyard Kipling was not one of her literary enthusiasms and of his poems she said, "all of them might have been written by Jesse Pomeroy." She refused to believe that Henry James had become an Englishman, saying, "he probably said it was a pleasant day in such a roundabout way that nobody knew what he was driving at." When someone asked, "Does he know anything?" about a young man invited much one winter in Boston society, Mrs. Bell claimed, "Know anything! He does not even suspect." As to the cult of the athletic girl, "Personally, I should rather have one man come to see me because he liked to talk to me than 10 because I kicked higher than any girl in Manchester." In the early days of the automobile she declared, "It will divide all mankind into two classes, the quick and the dead."

By no means all her clever remarks were the sort that carried a sting. Many were born of her loyalty, tenderness and shyness. And "over her inner life was the triple armor of reserve so characteristic of New England."

(5721.) Who wrote "There is a satisfaction in the consciousness of being well dressed that even the consolations of religion cannot afford"? Alexander Black, in the May Century Magazine, lays it to Emerson, but the ethical note is not Emersonian. L. A. C.

[Emerson, in "Letters and Social Aims," Boston, 1876, page 79, says: "I have heard with admiring submission the experience of the lady who declared 'that the sense of being perfectly well dressed gives a feeling of inward tranquility which religion is powerless to bestow."

When the question as to the originator of this remark was asked recently in Notes and Queries, several replies were received, among which were the following:

"According to an item which appeared in the New York Tribune about 1905, it was Mrs. Helen Olcott Bell, Rufus Choate's witty daughter, who originated the very apt remark: 'In a woman, the consciousness of being well dressed gives a sense of tranquillity which religion fails to bestow.'"

"I have always heard the quotation ascribed to Margaret Fuller. Emerson's version must be correct, as the remark was made to him, and they were close friends."

Another correspondent gave Thomas Jefferson as the originator; another suggested Gail Hamilton.

JUDGE CHAMBERLAIN'S ESSAYS

The volume of essays and addresses by Hon. Mellen Chamberlain, LL. D., which Mr. Lindsay Swift has gathered in the volume John Adams and Other Essays, gives permanent and handsome form to a series of papers possessing rare and diversified value. The first address, which gives the title, is succeeded by others on such significant themes as The Authenticity of the Declaration of Independence, Remarks on the New Historical School, Daniel Webster as an Orator, Landscape in Life and in Poetry, The Old and the New Order in New England, Life and Letters, etc. The broad, thorough scholarship, the discriminating judgment, the aptness and felicity of expression exhibited in these addresses reveal afresh the distinguished abilities and rich attainments of the author. Best of all, they exhibit a largeness of mind which, without disguising the positiveness of his convictions and without weakening his controversial power, disarms opponents by displaying his geniality of spirit and his candor.

Judge Chamberlain is at home in New England history as well as in the larger relations of our national development, and he has given his readers as solid material in the way of thought as any historical writer of our times. And the simplicity and directness as well as a certain glow of his style render his productions more than ordinarily readable. His paper on The Declaration of Independence seems to establish the fact that the signatures to that document were not all appended at once, on The Fourth of July, 1776, as is commonly supposed. That on The New Historical School is a sagacious warning against carrying theories of historical research and narrative to extremes. That on The Genesis of a Massachusetts Town is a piece of acute criticism and conclusion, a noteworthy feature of which is the position that such towns have no essential relation to those of the mother country, either in origin or in development. The papers on Quincy and Webster are vivid and even brilliant pieces of characterization, and an entirely different sort of subject, Landscape in Life and in Poetry, is discussed with no less richness of suggestion. The volume is one of the most stimulating and rewarding to be found. [Houghton, Mifflin & Co. $2.00.]

By the will of Hon. William C. Todd of Atkinson, four years its president, the New Hampshire Historical Society receives $15,000, the income to be spent in purchasing historical and genealogical works, which, with $6,500 previously given, makes a total of $21,500. Other public bequests are $10,000 to the N. E. Historical and Genealogical Society of Boston, and $2,000 to Colorado College. Mt. Holyoke College is made residuary legatee, and rumor has it that the amount will approximate $500,000. The significance of this last bequest is his appreciation of the endeavor to keep prices low enough to enable girls of limited means to obtain a liberal education.

Mr. Todd's benefactions while living were: $50,000 to the Boston Public Library to buy newspapers, and $50,000 or more for a hospital at Newburyport, Mass., besides smaller sums to various institutions.

TODD, W. C. At Atkinson, N. H., June 27—80 yrs.

He was widely known throughout New England by his many gifts to public institutions. He was a Dartmouth graduate, a teacher in Kentucky and from 1854 to 1864 principal of the Newburyport female high school. He represented Atkinson in the N. H. legislature. He was a believer in the press and gave to Boston $50,000 for the benefit of a newspaper reading room in the public library. He traveled abroad extensively.

GROTON.

DR. NOAH TORREY, the oldest practising physician in Norfolk county, died at his home in South Braintree, on Sunday last, of heart failure. His death was very sudden. During the day he attended two cases of illness.

DR. Torrey was born in Groton, and at the time of his death he was seventy-eight years of age. He was a graduate of Dartmouth college and had been a member of Rural lodge, F. A. M., of Quincy, for many years, and lately was made an honorary member.

During his many years' residence in Braintree, Dr. Torrey had held many town offices, including the town clerkship, tax collector, town treasurer, and school committee. He leaves a widow and three children, one of whom is postmaster W. A. Torrey. He was a younger brother of the late Willard Torrey, of Groton.

DR. NOAH TORREY is a son of Noah and Sarah (Blanchard) Torrey, and was born at Groton, on December 23, 1818. His father was born at Abington, on December 19, 1772; and his mother at Weymouth, on June 13, 1781. He fitted for college at Groton Academy, and graduated at Dartmouth College in the Class of 1844. He attended lectures at the Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, where he took the degree of M. D. in March, 1847. Soon after graduation, Dr. Torrey began the practice of his profession at Braintree, where he has since lived. On November 16, 1851, he was married to Lucinda, daughter of Jonathan and Ruth (Penniman) Thayer, of Braintree; and they have two sons and a daughter.

HON. JOHN B. D. COGSWELL, widely known throughout the State, died of paralysis Tuesday afternoon in Haverhill, where he had been residing for several years past. He formerly lived in Yarmouth, where he was born June 6, 1829. After a preliminary education at Phillips Andover Academy, John Bear Doane Cogswell entered Dartmouth College and there graduated in 1850. Taking up the study of law he received his degree of LL. B. at the Harvard Law School in 1852, but five years later became so actively identified with political work as to obtain a seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives from Worcester. Shortly after this he removed to Milwaukee, Wis., and became the law partner of his brother-in-law, Mr. S. N. Small. From 1861 to 1868 he was United States Attorney for the District of Wisconsin. On his return to Massachusetts he once more entered earnestly into political life, and in 1871, '72 and '73 represented Yarmouth in the House. In 1877, '78 and '79 he was in the State Senate, serving as President of that body. His first election to the Presidency was obtained in opposition to Hon. Selwyn Z. Bowman, but the next year brought him into the chair by a unanimous vote. In political campaigns Mr. Cogswell often made addresses, and his speeches were almost always eloquent and effective. In 1872 he was one of the delegates from Massachusetts to the Republican National Convention, and represented the State upon the Committee on Platform. Since 1880 Mr. Cogswell retired to private life. He leaves one daughter.

WILTON, N. H.

Celebration of the 83d Birthday of Rev. Increase Sumner Lincoln.

[Correspondence of The Boston Journal.]

WILTON, N. H., June 21. Yesterday being the 83d anniversary of the birth of one of the oldest living Unitarian ministers in the United States, Rev. Increase Sumner Lincoln, whose residence is in the East Village of this town, his friends prevailed upon him to hold a quiet informal reception in the afternoon, giving an opportunity to all the people to call at his home and congratulate him upon the occasion. Notice of the reception having been read in all the town churches last Sunday, a very large number of people, without regard to sect or party, availed themselves of the invitation, and from 3 to 6 P. M. filled the pleasant home of the aged divine, who, with his accomplished and faithful companion, received the cordial greetings of the numerous company, and rendered the occasion one of rare pleasure to all who were privileged to be present. Mr. Lincoln was born in Warren, Mass., and entered Yale College sixty-four years ago, from which he was graduated sixty years ago. After passing through the prescribed course in the theological department of the same college, then under the charge of the eminent Dr. Taylor, who was a most determined opponent of Calvinism, he was graduated from that school in 1824, and was ordained and installed pastor of the First Congregational Church in Gardner, Mass., where he remained for eighteen years. Having imbibed from his distinguished theological teacher Arminian views of religion, it was natural that he should be favorably impressed with Dr. Channing's writings, which, falling into his hands, at length determined him to connect himself with the Unitarian denomination, of whose ministry he has been an honored member during the last thirty-five years. But while he has been a consistent Unitarian of the Channing school he has never ceased to regard with undiminished kindness the religious communion in which he was born and educated, and the feeling has been reciprocated by the ministers and people of the Orthodox Congregational Church in all the communities in which he has lived. Very beautiful is this harmony in diversity. Mr. Lincoln in July, 1879, had been pastor of the First Congregational (Unitarian) Church in this town ten years, at which time, being 80 years old, he thought it best to retire from the cares and duties of a pastorate, though he was still vigorous in mind and body. And he has continued to preach much of the time on Sundays since, statedly, once each month at the House of Correction, besides having the superintendency of the schools of the town until last spring. Thus he has lived in Wilton for the last thirteen years, respected, and honored, and loved by all sects. He is the father of twelve children, six of whom only are living on earth. His eldest son is the distinguished Dr. N. S. Lincoln of Washington, D. C. He has also a son, Sumner, of the rank of Captain in the regular army, and a grandson who is a physician, Dr. Solon S. Stone, living in Malden, Mass. He has been married twice. His first wife was the daughter of Dr. Nathan Smith, Professor first at Dartmouth and then at Yale Medical Colleges. The present Mrs. Lincoln is the daughter of the late James M. Conant of Gardner, Mass.

Their friends desired to leave with them some visible token of their confidence and esteem, and so a gold-headed ebony cane, of as elegant a pattern as could be procured, was provided for Mr. Lincoln and a full set of exquisitely-wrought Duchess point lace was purchased for Mrs. Lincoln. Brief informal addresses, prayer having been offered by Rev. Mr. Tracy of the Congregational Church, were made during the afternoon by Rev. Mr. Twiss of the Liberal Christian Church, Rev. Mr. Lincoln, Rev. A. A. Livermore, President of Meadville Theological School, Meadville, Penn.; Zebadiah Abbott and William Emerson of Wilton. Letters from W. P. Tilden of Boston, Mass., and Miss Elizabeth A. Livermore, and a selected poem from Mrs. Persis Putnam and Miss Phebe Lovejoy of Milford, N. H., were read, all of which breathed very beautiful and appropriate sentiments, notably Mr. Tilden's letter. After a beautiful address by Mrs. Lincoln the exercises were brought to a close by reading a letter and a very beautiful poem written for the occasion by Mrs. Mary A. Livermore.

Collection of Stereopticon Slides Representing Thirty Years' Work Likely to Be Moved to Boston.

May 1909

Several clubs and religious organizations of Chicago recently have had their attention called to the Farrar stereopticon slide collection by reason of the fact that it is to be moved to Boston, if plans of Miss Frances Farrar, a daughter of the compiler, are carried out.

The collection is the result of thirty years' work by the late Prof. C. S. Farrar of Milwaukee, and numbers 23,070 slides, 1,116 of which are colored. The subjects deal principally with the civilization of the Mississippi valley.

"The collection is likely to be broken up," said Jenkin Lloyd Jones. "It would be a good thing if some philanthropist would purchase it and present it to the city. It constitutes a pictorial history that I do not suppose any fortune could duplicate."

REV. FESTUS FOSTER

Rev. Festus Foster, son of Rev. R. B. Foster, D. D., was born at Tabor, Ia., in 1856. The family removed to Osborne, Kan., in 1872, where the father was a home missionary preacher. Festus attended Washburn College, Topeka, Kan., in 1875-76, and graduated from the State University at Lawrence, Kan, in 1882. He attended Yale Theological Seminary in 1883-84. He was married to Miss Lillie Howe in 1883. He served as a home missionary preacher in Colorado, Utah, Oklahoma and Kansas. He was probation officer in Kansas City, Kan., two years and was the first moving picture censor in Kansas. During the last year of his life he was in charge of the federal employment bureau in Topeka, Kan.

Besides Mrs. Foster he leaves five children, Paul, First Lieutenant on a submarine for three years during the war and twice honored by Congress for conspicuous bravery; Carroll, United States Consul in Vienna; Ralph, professor in the Naval Academy at Annapolis; Festus, First Lieutenant on the battleship Oklahoma, and Dorothy, secretary of girls' work in the Y. W. C. A., at Wichita, Kan.

Mr. Foster was an indefatigable worker, a man of unflinching courage, possessing a clear sense of the right and a blazing antagonism for what is wrong. After a life of such consecrated loyalty and Christian heroism, it can well be said of him:

Life's work well done,
Life's race well run;
Life's crown well won,
And now, cometh rest.

OBITUARY.

Rev. Charles Cutler died in Tallmadge, O., October 30, 1914, aged 87 years. He was a graduate of Dartmouth college, class of '52, and of Andover seminary, class of '56. He taught several years in the famous Phillips Academy, Andover.

More than half of his life as a pastor and preacher was spent in various churches in New England. In Ohio he was pastor for four years of the Tallmadge church in the early 70s, and later in Burton, Geauga county, for seven years. After another pastorate in New England he returned to Tallmadge and lived for 23 years in retirement.

He married a second time, taking as his companion his lifelong friend, Mrs. Fannie Pierce Wolcott, the widow of Deacon Elizur Wolcott—a woman never to be forgotten in Tallmadge. Since her death, some eight years ago, he had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. William Carter.

We rehearse these bare facts as interesting to old friends. The chief matter for the public to know is that a Christian gentleman of the best quality has at last taken his farewell of Tallmadge and Summit county. His attainments were sound; his talents, while not brilliant, were eminently respectable and useful. His personal character, tested through many years and in many relations, was distinguished by simplicity, purity, honesty, fidelity and friendliness. Our Lord's portrait of a good man, in the Beatitudes, is almost a biography of Mr. Cutler. The beauty of it all is that he was not a single exceptional example, but one of a generation of sterling men and women who have made not only Summit county and the state of Ohio, but our whole country what it is. The exclamation of Elisha as he looked upon the ascending form of his great friend and teacher, "The chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof!" is splendid and faithful characterization of a band of men and women, now mostly passed over, who were the true bulwarks and defenders and defenses of our country, literal armaments—ships and forts and great guns and marshaled troops — however needful, are vain things in comparison with the guardian spirits of the noble, patriotic and brave men and women who, entering into rest, have left immortal memorials and added to the volume of that river which both makes glad the City of God and defends it from its foes.

Fitting memorial services were conducted Sunday afternoon in the Tallmadge Congregational church, of which Mr. Cutler was once an honored pastor. Dr. Sutherland, the recently chosen pastor, presided. Rev. Howard Barnes offered prayer. Rev. W. B. Marsh, as pastor of the church and friend of many years, made the memorial address. As Mr. Cutler had expressed his wishes in the matter, the services were conducted with as little display as possible, but the hearts of the people lay more beautiful tributes on the altar of love than floral wreaths.

—WILLIAM B. MARSH.

REV. GEORGE DUSTAN

Rev. George Dustan, son of Jonathan and Sarah (Morrison Centre) Dustan, was born in Lebanon, N. H., Nov. 26, 1828; was graduated at Dartmouth College 1852, and at Andover Seminary 1859; was ordained and installed pastor of the Union Evangelical Church, Peterboro, N. H., Oct. 19, 1859, holding the pastorate most acceptably till his resignation after a little more than twenty-five years. He was dismissed Dec. 4, 1884. Mr. Dustan married Miss Lucy A. Marsh, only daughter of Rev. Joseph and Lucy Dana Marsh of Thetford, Vt., Feb. 14, 1855, who died Sept. 14, 1862, aged thirty-one years. He married second Miss Sarah L. Nichols, only daughter of Deacon James and Adelaide Field Nichols, of Peterboro, May 4, 1864. Besides the widow two sons—Dana Marsh Dustan of Cambridge, and George Parker Dustan of Peterboro, N. H., and two daughters, Gertrude Louise Dustan and Grace Dustan Rawson, both of Hartford, Ct., survive him.

After leaving college Mr. Dustan taught some years in New Boston, N. H., and at McIndoe Falls, Vt.; was an excellent teacher—scholarly, kind, helpful, efficient and respected by the whole community. While teaching in New Boston he became specially interested in religion and united with the Presbyterian church in that town. His pastorate in Peterboro was one of the most successful in the history of the New Hampshire churches. Two weak churches, the Presbyterian and the Congregational, came together in 1858, and under his most excellent and careful management became one of the strongest in the state.

Mr. Dustan might fairly be called a faithful man, true to the word, steady in work, with always a calm, watchful eye to the best interests of the church; was far-seeing, judicious, wise and conservative in all his plans; was an exceeding useful man in the town and in the vicinity, always giving the best and safest advice in any case of need. His influence was always decidedly on the right side. His work was of the kind to survive; and his record one of the best in the ministry of the state.

Mr. Dustan represented the town of Peterboro in the legislature of New Hampshire in 1870 and in 1871; was appointed by the governor (1870) trustee of the State Normal School. The funeral services, in charge of Rev. W. R. Cochrane, D. D., a former pupil and brother in the ministry, were held in the Peterboro church, March 29, 1902, and his body was laid to rest among the loved people of his charge.

Deed of Mt. Chocorua.

It is quite safe to say that no county in New Hampshire or any other New England state has on its records the copy of a more unique instrument of conveyance than that by which William Fox of Wolfboro deeded away Mount Chocorua. As a poetic effusion it quite equals Mark Twain's "Tale of an Awful Deed." It is recorded in the Carroll county registry of deeds and is as follows:

Know all men, lords, esquires and peasants,
And know all women by these presents—
In short, let all creation know,
That I, Bill Fox, of Wolfboro,
State of New Hampshire, county Carroll,
A yeoman bald, unused to hair oil,
In duplicate consideration
Of good will toward my blood relation
And two bear's feet most oleaginous—
Ungrateful let no man imagine us—
To me in hand before inditing,
Or ever thought of, was this writing,
And which I, bound for land o' Canaan,
Will daily rub upon my cranium,
Delivered by one Witt de Carter,
A true descended son of Sparta,
And ward ad litem of old Nimrod,
The tutelar saint of gun and ramrod,
Of Ossipee, of state aforesaid,
And county ditto—be no more said
Of that venue for tattlers gossippy;
Enough will tell of "righteous" Ossipee—
Do thus remise, release and quitclaim,
Nor to myself henceforth one whit claim,
So long as I am reckoned vital,
To said De Witt all right and title
Which I or my male tale descendant,
In gross in common and appendant,
Can claim or hope to claim or covet,
While glitters gold and misers love it,
In and unto a certain parcel
Or piece of land—don't deem it farce all—
In Sim's dominions situated,
Containing, as 'twas estimated
By actual measurement and survey
Of engineers now dead with scurvy,
Five million acres nine square perches,
Beside the intervale of birches,
Including mountains, hills and hollows,
And bounded and described as follows,
To wit: Begin at Whiteface school-house,
And running toward McGaffey's toolhouse,
Thence where two highways fork and spangle,
Jog off upon the sin'ster angle
To Dave Rowe's cabin hospitable,
Thence where the d—l you are able,
Keeping in close perambulation
Within the merits of Yankee nation,
Remembering, when at last you've done it,
To leave off at the bounds begun at;
Hereby both meaning and intending
That litigation it mayn't end in.
The said grantee shall be invested
With all Chocorua granite-crested,
Whereon grim bruin growls in glory,
From verdant base to summit hoary;
To have and hold the same forever,
Provided he be longest liver,
To him, his heirs, assigns, successors,
A chain of undisturbed possessors,
With each appurtenance and privilege
Thereto belonging in a civil age.
And I do covenant with said Carter,
While earth is land and two-thirds water,
And I am spared by rueful Nemesis
To warrant and defend the premises,
To him and his from parchment blunder,
And scamps unborn me claiming under,
But not to warrant and defend them
When Ursa Majors seek to rend 'em.
But rightful lords and lawless squatters
For title then to trust their trotters.
In witness whereof, super vellum,
I set my manum et sigillum,
Year eighteen hundred six and sixty,
September third, O deed, I fixed ye;
May Sirius ne'er in wrath o'erwhelm us.

LAWYER FOX DROWNED.

Lost His Life While Fishing with His Son in Lake Winnipiseogee.

[Special Dispatch to the Boston Herald.]

WOLFBORO, N. H., May 22, 1897. William C. Fox, lawyer, age 50, was drowned in Lake Winnipiseogee last night, while fishing near his camp on Mud island. His boat overturned, and he and his son John were thrown into the water. After a hard struggle his son reached the island, where he was obliged to remain until this morning. Searching parties started at once, but as yet the body has not been found. Mr. Fox was a graduate of Dartmouth.

GEN. CHARLES E. HOVEY.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Gen. C. E. Hovey, a well-known lawyer, died here today, aged 70.

He was born in Vermont in 1827, and after he was graduated from Dartmouth College, moved to Illinois, where he founded the Illinois State Normal University. When the war broke out he resigned as its principal, and under President Lincoln's commission raised the 33d Illinois Volunteers.

Gallantry at the battle of Cache River gained him promotion to brigadier-general and an assignment to Gen. Sherman's command. He served in the siege of Vicksburg, where he contracted an illness that forced him to resign from the army.

The Vermont Union

A Lyndon edition would be "short" if it failed to mention that long time and noteworthy Lyndon institution, the Vermont Union, and its unique editor, C. M. Chase.

Mr. Chase was born in Lyndon in 1829, one of the sons of Gen. E. B. Chase, well-known as a pioneer of the Passumpsic Railroad and a business man of standing and influence. Charles M. received his preparatory education in the Academies of Lyndon, St. Johnsbury and Meriden, N. H., and graduated from Dartmouth College in the class of '53. During the first years after leaving college, Mr. Chase divided his time between studying law and teaching in Cinn, O., having charge for three years of the vocal music department in Ohio Female College, and Farmers' College, conducting conventions, giving concerts, etc.

In 1957 he was admitted to the bar in Sycamore, Ill., where he commenced the practice of his profession, at the same time editing the De Kalb County Sentinel and teaching music.

Mr. Chase enlisted in 1861 and had charge of the brigade band of the 13th Ill., Volunteers, until their discharge at the end of three months in south western Missouri. In 1863-4 he was in Kansas some of the time as a travelling correspondent of the Sycamore Republican, describing the stirring scenes of that exciting period. In 1865 he commenced the publication of the Vermont Union at Lyndon.

Mr. Chase has been local reporter, editorial writer and business manager, and has made the Union a reflection of the various local happenings described in his off hand and picturesque style. In connection with this enterprise he has made numerous trips to Florida, California and the western and southern states as correspondent of his own paper, one of these trips being published in book form, with the title of "Editor's Run in New Mexico and Colorado."

C. M. Chase married Mary E. Wells in 1865. Their five children are Everett B., John B.,Geo. A.,Jennie U. and Nellie L.

Mr. Chase is democratic in his political proclivites, but don't work much at the business nowadays. In his reports of local matters he is independent, spicy and often facetious.

The Union has occasionally published some very interesting reminiscences of Lyndon and the editor knows everybody in his bailiwick. He has been the standard bearer of the unterrified democracy for States Attorney, also for Congress in 1866-8 and was a delegate to the National Convention in St. Louis in 1876. He has been a keen financier and is a director of the Lyndon National Bank and the Savings Bank and Trust Co. of St. Johnsbury.

Fifty Years in the Ministry

The Joys and Rewards of a Pastor's Life

By Arthur Little, D. D.

Fifty years ago this month, I was a student in the middle class of Princeton Seminary. Most unexpectedly advised of an appointment to the chaplaincy of the First Vermont Heavy Artillery Regiment, then in the defense of Washington, I hastened, without delay, to my home for ordination. On the sixteenth of March that event which has meant so much in my life occurred.

AT THE FRONT

A few weeks later I was mustered into the service of the United States. For something more than a year our regiment remained in the defenses of Washington, then one vast military camp and the most interesting city in the world, in striking contrast with the cloister life of Princeton.

After the terrific battle of the Wilderness, the regiment, with light arms, was rushed to the front to help fill the decimated ranks of the Army of the Potomac. It shared the fortunes of this army on the celebrated "flank movement," at Cold Harbor, and with it crossed the James and encamped in front of Petersburg.

A few weeks later our corps was detached from this army and took part in Sheridan's brilliant campaign in the valley of the Shenandoah. We had the distinction of being present at Lee's Surrender at Appomattox Court House on April 9, 1865.

I have felt that these two years and more in personal contact with the indescribable horrors of war more than compensated me for the heavy loss in my seminary course. It was a good place to study polemics. The exhibitions of heroism and suffering constantly seen enhanced my estimate of the nobility and worth of man.

Midsummer came and we were mustered out of service and homeward bound.

IN QUIET NEW HAMPSHIRE

The transition from the camp, the battlefield and the dehumanizing influences of war to a pastorate in a quiet country town in New Hampshire, among a plain, warmhearted people, unspoiled by the insincerities of city life, is a sensation few can ever know.

The environment of hill and valley and orchard and snowdrift and plain folks was native to me. The whole town was my parish. All the homes and schoolhouses were open to me and I tasted the joy of the country parson. It was the very elixir of life to my soul.

Three quiet, peaceful years among the hills when communion with God, with nature and with books suffered few interruptions, were followed, against the earnest entreaties of those stanch country people, by a ministry of ten years, far out upon the prairies of Wisconsin, the most beautiful of all the states in the Mississippi Valley. I liked its invigorating air, its lakes, its rivers, its forests and its blue sky.

The footsteps of the frontiersman were still visible. My home was in the city of Fond du Lac. The church was young and ambitious. The hospitality of the people was gracious and abundant. This change of a thousand miles gave a fresh impulse to my ministry. I felt the thrill of the newer and less conventional life. I could breathe more freely. God crowned the years with his abundant blessing.

One year in this field was made memorable by the reception of one hundred members into the church at a single communion, the result of union meetings with a Methodist church which received an equal number.

The outside demands in home missionary work and in addressing schools and colleges were very congenial to me and helped to invest those ten happy years of my early manhood with a nameless charm not too common in the ministry. Youth, health and hopefulness furnish a fine equipment for a difficult task and keep one within sight of those halcyon days of which the muses sing. It was almost unbroken sunshine during the ten years in Wisconsin.

The predatory instinct, sometimes developed in pastorless churches, brought two or three observant men from Chicago to Fond du Lac in search of a pastor for the New England Church. Though contented and happy in the confidence of the people and the success of the work, with serious misgivings as to the wisdom of the change, I decided to plunge into the swirling maelstrom of life in Chicago and to accept the pastorate of the New England Church. Had my wisdom been equal to my audacity I should doubtless have remained in Wisconsin.

I am grateful for a lifetime of good health.

I am grateful for the confidence and affection shown me by my brethren in the ministry, East and West, through this long stretch of time. Such fellowship is priceless and will be eternal.

I am glad that my working years have been included within these two dates, 1863-1913—the most commanding and transforming half century in the history of the world.

I thank God for fifty years of increasing gladness and joy in the Christian ministry. There have been some shadows, but floods of sunlight.

With the utmost trepidation I took up the new task. It seemed to me tremendous. But I was not alone in it. The disastrous fire which a few years before had destroyed their beautiful house of worship and the homes of all the worshipers had made them invincible in their purpose to push the work of the church. Strong men and earnest women were swift with offers of help.

During more than a decade it was my privilege to share in its enlarging sphere of influence. Many of its most useful activities were quite outside our own communion. The Theological Seminary is immensely its debtor both for money and counsel. It was the birthplace of the New West Education Commission and of the Chicago City Missionary Society. It was very influential in bringing the Illinois Home Missionary Society to self-support. It has a record of sustained enthusiasm towards the American Board. For the opportunity of some small share in these great Christian activities which have enriched the world I am devoutly thankful. Such enterprises exalt the ministry.

Life in Chicago always had a certain fascination for me. Things were projected on a big scale. Its smokiness, which soiled my linen, did not depress my spirits. Its business life, its social life, its intellectual life, its religious life were congenial to my taste and created in me agreeable reactions. Most grateful am I for those eleven inspiring years in the ambitious city by the lake.

When was a minister ever known to refuse a call to Boston, especially if it came from the best church in the city? To me it proved irresistible. Twenty-four years ago I became pastor of the Second Church in Dorchester. The traditional reserve of Boston did not appear in the welcome accorded the new minister—the fourth now in more than a hundred years. There was quite all of the alleged Western warmth in it, and its spirit has continued unabated through the years. The Second Church has made good much more than was promised at the first.

A large volume would be required to tell the story of these contented years. Judged by visible results they have been the most fruitful in a long ministry.

With the conclusion of my pastorate here, a few months ago, my public ministry ended. Fifty years have now been rounded out and the record, sadly fragmentary and incomplete, must stand.

Of course the most vital experiences of a minister—those in which he has shared the tragedy of other lives—cannot be written. The things that make a minister's heartache must remain forever locked up in his own breast. There must, therefore, be a great unwritten and unpublished chapter in the life of a pastor.

In this hurried backward glance the events that I most distinctly recall awaken in me a profound sense of gratitude to God for his lovingkindness and tender mercy.

It distresses me to hear the ministry disparaged, especially by ministers. For today it offers a tremendous sweep of influence and power to our most gifted young men. Thrice happy those who have the vision to see it.

If my testimony is of any value, it is in behalf of the country boy, born and reared on a farm, of average ability, with a Christian home, Christian church and the little red schoolhouse as his only helpers until he is sixteen years old. With resolute purpose and hard work such a boy may graduate with honor from college and seminary and become a useful and influential minister of the gospel. This hundreds of New England country boys have done.

Whenever the great New England Epic is written, its theme will be, The Country Parson, with his small salary, large family of children, nearly all graduates of college, and his domination of the life of the community.

Boys, young men, if you wish to realize the highest ideals in life, study for the ministry.

OBSERVE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Friends and Relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Greet Them at Fiftieth Mile Post

Oct. 31, 1917

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Ely observed the 50th anniversary of their wedding yesterday at their home on Summer street. Throughout the day the genial couple played host and hostess to the scores of friends who called to congratulate them upon reaching the golden milepost. Following a family dinner served at the St. Johnsbury House early in the evening, a reception for relatives and friends took place at the home. Among the most pleasant occurrances of the occasion was the presentation of a silver loving cup as a token of esteem from the directors of the Passumpsic Savings bank. Judge Walter P. Smith tendered the gift with appropriate remarks which were responded to by Mr. Ely. A beautiful bouquet of roses was given by the Ely Company employes. Many other handsome gifts were also received.

Henry G. Ely and Miss Adelaide Newall were married a half century ago at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Selim Newell, in the house that is now the rectory of the North Congregational church. Immediately after their marriage they went to Northfield, where the groom was employed as bank cashier. In 1874 Mr. and Mrs. Ely returned to St. Johnsbury where he entered the office of the firm of Ely, Balch and Company, of which his father was senior partner.

For many years the couple have taken an active part in all social activities of the town and have shown great interest in church work. Mr. Ely is a deacon in the South Congregational church and Mrs. Ely has been actively engaged in all departments of the organization for many years.

The groom of 50 years was born in Littleton, N. H., in 1842. He came to St. Johnsbury in his early youth and was educated in the public schools here and in the St. Johnsbury Academy. Leaving Dartmouth college in his freshman year Mr. Ely enlisted in Company K of the 15th Vermont Regiment. At the close of the war he returned here to learn the manufacturing part of the Ely Fork and Hoe Company. The business was founded by his father in 1848. Later Mr. Ely became associated with his brother, George Ely, in the firm. In 1902 he was made president of the concern of which he had been the active head for many years.

The still young bride was born in Lyndon, but like her husband, came to this place in her early childhood, where her father was an eminent physician. She was educated here in the public schools and attended the St. Johnsbury Academy.

During the years four children have entered the home: Ellen, wife of G. W. Kyburg of Springfield, Mass., Margaret, wife of Lindol Scott, Miss Caroline Ely of St. Johnsbury, and Miss Mary Ely of New York City. They have four grandchildren who were all present with their parents with the exception of Lieutenant Henry Kyburg, who is at present "somewhere in France" with the American Expeditionary Force.

Among those here for the anniversary were: Mr. Ely's brother, William H. of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., together with his wife, a sister of Mrs. Ely, Miss Etta M. Newell of Hanover, N. H., Mrs. Robert Hannah of Fergus Falls, Minn., Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McWhorter. The latter ladies are nieces.

1819. John Aiken. From a Funeral Sermon on the Life and Character of this truly estimable man, one of the greatest ornaments of his college, by the Rev. Charles Smith, his pastor, this admirable eulogy is taken; "Brethren and Friends, we have lost a truly great man. Such is the feeling of every heart in this house, and the expression of every body's lips in the town who knew our friend. I have tried to set before you some of the elements of his greatness, but I am painfully conscious of having failed to do full justice to his merits, or to have reached in delineation the true altitude of the man. But even with this shortcoming of mine, I think enough has been fairly set forth in his character to commend it to the admiration of all, and to make it seem worthy of imitation to all sensible young men. You cannot all be his equals in mental endowments and acquisitions, for he was wise above the common measure of men, but you can follow close in his footsteps in those respects in which his great excellency lay. That about Mr Aiken, which made him so wonderfully complete as a man, was his religion. This entered into his soul as its chief nourishment, as sap into the trunk and branches of a tree. He would have been a remarkable man, doubtless, without piety, but no more the symmetrical man that he was, than the tree with sapless roots is the tree "whose leaves are for the healing of the nations."
