

Call
Undergraduate Summer Internship at U of Pristina (Kosovo):
UP Center for Gender Studies and Research

Who is eligible: Dartmouth undergraduates affiliated with Women's, Gender, and Sexualities Studies (WGSS) or the Gender Research Institute at Dartmouth (GRID)
Project dates: Summer Term 2017
Application Deadline: May 2, 2017

OVERVIEW: Eligible Dartmouth undergraduates are invited to apply for a summer internship at the University of Pristina (Kosovo) sponsored by the Gender Research Institute at Dartmouth (GRID). The selected intern will work closely with faculty and students at the U of Pristina's Center for Gender Studies and Research (GSR) during their vibrant summer term. The selected intern will be engaged in the organization of their upcoming summer school on gender and sexuality, especially in posting information via social media as well as contributing with feeds on GSR's blogging platform. The student will work with a team of Kosovo students on workshops on how to conduct research and write policy papers concerning gender, poverty, and access to social provisions. Finally, in coordination with UP students, the GRID intern will support the UP GSR team in their daily activities and planning of public events and reporting.

This is an internship for students who feel comfortable in international settings, appreciate interacting with peers from different cultural backgrounds, and who would like to support the efforts of a young European nation as it struggles to develop strong democratic institutions.

The internship includes round-trip airfare and living expenses during the summer.

TO APPLY:

Please email: (1) cover letter outlining your interest, qualifications, and contribution you would make to the project; (2) your current resume; and (3) the names of two references. Please send these documents in PDF format to: Nancy O'Brien, Program Manager, Gender Research Institute at Dartmouth (GRID): Nancy.O'Brien@dartmouth.edu