

Dartmouth College Library
The Edward Connery Lathem '51 Digital Library Fellowship
(2018-2019)

The Edward Connery Lathem '51 Digital Library Fellowship provides an opportunity for a graduating student or recent graduate of Dartmouth to spend a year learning and contributing to new directions in the open dissemination of materials resulting from Dartmouth's digital scholarship, research, and educational activities.

The fellowship is designed to be tailored to the individual interests of the candidate in support of the mission of the Scholarly Communication, Copyright and Publishing Program and the Digital Library Program. The Fellow is encouraged to propose a project that furthers the development and awareness of open repository and digital publishing systems and services. There are opportunities to develop knowledge of digital publishing, including copyright and metadata; to develop skills in teaching and marketing about key initiatives; and to collaborate on projects with other Fellows and staff across the Dartmouth Library.

Following are examples of the work that may be involved, depending on the interest of the successful candidate:

- Further develop the Dartmouth Digital Commons as a core site and service for the open dissemination of the results of Dartmouth research, scholarship, and education.
- Support students involved in student-led publishing through the use of the Dartmouth Digital Commons publishing system and involvement in educational activities.
- Assist with developing communities and collections on the Dartmouth Digital Commons publishing system.
- Assist with workshop development, facilitation and teaching; and outreach events across campus in collaboration with the Library's Education and Outreach Program.
- Participate in projects and meetings with the Open Dartmouth Working Group, the Digital Library Program, and other units in the Dartmouth Library.

Strong interpersonal and communications skills, comfort with information technology, and an enthusiasm for learning new tools and concepts for digital publishing are essential. Creative thinking, grace in handling multiple projects, and a sense of humor are welcomed!
